Move to Outlaw AAA Tax Suits Loses in Senate

Amendments Face Increasing Hostility

Defeat, 61-23, Presages Troubles for Bill to Ban Gold Actions.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Senate yesterday by a 61-to-23 roll-call vote refused to slam shut the doors of the courts against suits to recover processing taxes that have not been passed on to producer or consumer.

It was the second damaging blow struck at the Administration's AAA amendments in the Senate. Urged forward by two Texas court decisions, unfavorable to the AAA, a drive to further emasculate the measure was fast gathering headway.

A coalition compromise, submitted by Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), of Georgia, was adopted in lieu of the flat prohibition against processing tax suits.

Action came in the face of a statement to reporters by President Roosevelt that the Government should have power to bar suits against it. Speaking at his semiweekly press conference, President Roosevelt said every other government in the world exercises its right of sovereignty in such matters, adding that in his opinion the United States should have the same right.

The compromise permits any individual or company to sue to recover past or future processing taxes, if they can show they have not been able to transfer the levy.

Wide Implications.

Thirty-nine Democrats joined 20 Republicans, 1 Progressive and 1 Farmer-Laborite in approving the George amendment, with only 21 Democrats and 2 Republicans voting "No."

The vote was said to have implications that extended beyond the AAA amendments, to the coming Senate test on the Administration's gold bill to ban suits for recovery on Government obligations.

The gold bill passed the House by an overwhelming vote, but is now tied up in the Senate Banking Committee, where sentiment is rapidly crystallizing against it. The Senate's refusal to deny recourse to the courts on processing taxes was believed in some quarters to indicate how the vote may go on the Administration's proposal to ban suits for recovery of the full gold value of United States securities.

Copeland Move Beaten.

Earlier this week, the Senate rejected a committee amendment providing for fixing of a minimum resale price on farm products. Other price-fixing provisions in the bill, permitting determination of the price to the first handler, are now under fire.

Failing in an effort to complete consideration of the measure and adjourn over the week-end, Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson called the Senate back into session at 10 a. m. Just before adjournment, Administration forces rallied to block an attempt by Senator Royal S. Copeland, (Democrat), New York, to stop processing taxes once parity prices are reached.

Even while the Senate was striking from the bill the Administration's proposed ban on suits to recover processing taxes, Frank J. Wideman, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the tax division, announced that suits growing out of AAA processing taxes had reached 359, the number more than doubling within the last few days.

Under the Senate compromise, such of these litigants as can show they have not been able to pass the tax on to consumer or producer, may go through with the suit. The Administration proposal would have wiped the slate clean.

Another Court Blow.

The George amendment may have the further effect of assuring a Supreme Court test on the Hoosac mills case, where the Boston Circuit Court of Appeals ruled processing taxes unconstitutional.

As the Senate acted, the AAA suffered another blow in the courts on another issue. Provisions of the AAA act as the basis for price fix-

New Astor Heir 'Just Plain Bill'

By the United Press.

New York, July 19.—A 7-pound baby boy, who'll be named "just plain Bill," was born late today to Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor 3d, at Doctors' Hospital.

In the traditional manner of expectant fathers, young Astor anxiously paced the corridors until a smiling nurse brought the glad tidings—"It's a boy!"

Earlier the heir to millions had brought his young wife, the former Ellen Tuck ("Tucky") French, to the hospital in his automobile.

The pair were wed June 30 of last year in Trinity Church, Newport, in an atmosphere of excitement corresponding to that accompanying inauguration of a president.

Astor had been engaged to Miss Eileen Gillespie—friend of his present bride—but a fortnight before their scheduled nuptials she cancelled the engagement.

A scorching sun yesterday drove the temperature here up to a maximum of 95, one degree less than the year's record of 96, established last week, as the East sweltered in another heat wave, which has claimed an estimated 30 lives throughout the Nation.

Severe wind and rain storms swept upstate New York, bringing the total deaths during the heat wave and subsequent wind disturbances to seven in the last 48 hours, according to the Associated Press. New York City was drenched by a thunderstorm late in the afternoon.

The Weather Bureau predicted another sizzling 24 hours today as three Washingtonians were overcome and treated in hospitals. None was in serious condition.

Southwest winds, moving over the Middle West toward the Atlantic, are responsible for the mounting temperatures, scientists said.

The heat wave was general, with the mercury boiling to new high marks from the Alleghanies to the Missouri River. In a compilation late yesterday the United Press counted 30 dead, many of these drowned as they sought relief from searing wind and sun.

Hot spot of the Middle West was South Bend, Ind., where the Associated Press reported a maximum of 101. Ohio boiled. Temperatures in Columbus reached 100, and four deaths were attributed to the weather.

In Chicago, where a season's high of 95 was reached, one man was killed and 52 persons injured when a street car, bound for a South Side Beach was derailed and smashed into a viaduct.

Capitol Hill Inquiries.

William H. Collins, of Washington, was named counsel for House lobby investigating committee.

Ursil E. Beach, official of Associated Gas & Electric System, assumed full responsibility, before Senate committee for destruction of records of campaign against holding company "death sentence."

J. J. Pelley, head of Association of American Railroads, insists that committees set up in States by roads to present railroad situation to the public are "legitimate."

Testimony that Frank Speicher, while sought by Department of Justice as witness in War Department purchasing investigation, received money from Joseph Silverman, jr., dealer in surplus army goods, was given to the House Military Committee.

By James D. Secrest.

The House Rules Committee yesterday selected William H. Collins, Washington attorney, as its counsel and prepared to carry on its utility lobby inquiry well into the fall, as the Senate lobby committee rested temporarily after hearing an executive of the Associated Gas & Electric System admit issuing orders to destroy all records on the Wheeler-Rayburn bill campaign in 26 States.

Friction also became more apparent between the House and Senate committees as Chairman John J. O'Connor, of the House, spoke disparagingly of the Senate committee's disclosure of faked telegrams and burned records.

"Everybody has known for months about the faking of telegrams and letters in connection with the bill," he said. "Why, in New York they forced people to sign letters or telegrams or else signed them themselves.

What Did Lobbyists Do?

Meanwhile, members of Congress expressed interest in the charge by Labor, an American Federation of Labor paper, that a railroad lobby has assigned a railroad official to each New York Congressman "to see that the member of Congress for whom he is responsible is kept under the proper 'influence' at all times."

J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, in a statement said that "committees have been formed in the several States, composed of railroad officers, whose duty it is to present to the public, including members of Congress and State Legislatures, the facts about the railroad situation."

Defends Committee.

He expressed the belief that these committees are "altogether legitimate," and added, "We are sure no methods have been adopted which transcend the limits of propriety."

Senator Black said he had discussed the matter with Edward Keating, editor of Labor, but he declined to comment on the charges himself.

The newspaper listed each member of the New York congressional delegation alongside the railroad official assigned to "influence" him. New York members, among them Chairman O'Connor, immediately denied any knowledge of the railroad lobby.

While about 250 of the inquiries sent to all House members regarding their experiences with lobbyists on the Wheeler-Rayburn bill have been returned, O'Connor said that many appeared to be in the tenor of this one:

"No damn person said a damn thing to me about any damn bill."

O'Connor revealed that Repre-

THE WHITE HOUSE.

A Merry Half-Hour.

INTO the air-cooled, circular office of the President of the United States trooped a hundred or so newspaper correspondents—fewer than usual, due, perhaps, to the heat—for their semi-weekly press conference.

Cool and comfortable looking, smiling at those around his desk, the President adjusted a cigarette into his long ivory holder, struck a match, took a puff and leaned back in his swivel chair. "All in," shouted William J. Donaldson, superintendent of the House press gallery and major-domo of these conferences.

No news today, asserted the President, none at all. The lid would be on until Monday. He was motoring to Annapolis within an hour or two to board the Government yacht Sequoia to spend the week-end on Chesapeake Bay, fishing for hardheads. Need he go that far to find hardheads? drily asked a correspondent. Ho, ho, laughed the President and all the correspondents. Well, said the President, there were plenty of soft-heads around here. Ho, ho, laughed the correspondents.

How about appointments to the new Labor Disputes Board? Did the President think there was any limit to the power of the Federal Government to bar suits against itself? What, asked the President in mock surprise, did the correspondent want him to comment on Senator Borah's new theory that our sovereignty is different from the sovereignty of every other nation—that while they can not be sued, we can be sued ad lib. Ho, ho, laughed the correspondents.

"But do you—well—I guess you answered my question," asserted the inquirer as the correspondents broke out in another ho, ho.

For a few minutes solemnity reigned as the President explained weighty situations.

"Thank you, Mr. President," finally came in stentorian tones from the same senatorial-appearing correspondent, who always injects that remark whenever the conferences reach a dead-center.

But wait a minute. The correspondents had failed to ask a question anticipated by the President. Apparently he wanted them to have the answer, anyway. Several stories in the morning papers about unemployment relief were cuckoo, said the President. Ho, ho, laughed the correspondents.

20,000 Fight Paris Police In Pay Riots

Many Hurt as Mounted Guards Charge Into Shouting Mobs.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 19.—Crowds jammed into a mile-square area around the Place de l'Opera fought savagely with thousands of police and mobile guards tonight as the government sought to suppress demonstrations against nation-wide pay cuts.

Fist fights added to the turmoil as police dragged hundreds of demonstrators to jail. Police clubs felled many, but hours after the fighting became general there had been no serious injuries reported.

Police estimated that more than 20,000 men and women had converged on the Place de l'Opera to protest the economy decrees ordered by Premier Pierre Laval to save the franc.

Horses Driven Sideways.

Mounted republican guardsmen rode their horses sideways down the main avenues while massed groups of policemen with carbines forced back the crowds.

Police managed to block streets to the south, forcing the crowds northward. They estimated that 1,000 persons had been arrested.

First fighting became general shortly after 7 p. m. as the police, alert in anticipation of defiance of the premier's ban on demonstrations, hurled themselves into one throng numbering hundreds, pummelling those who resisted, routing others and hearding them into the Place Gaillon.

The manifestants, chanting the "Internationale," marched into the Place de l'Opera, scene of part of the bloody 1934 Stavisky riots, holding their fists aloft. Many shouted: "Police with us! Laval, resign!"

Girls Scream in Terror.

While women leaned yelling from windows and homeward-bound working girls caught in the press screamed with terror as police or demonstrators bore down upon them, the famous place echoed to shouted criticism of Laval's salary and pension cuts.

Quickly the police, augmented by mobile guards, moved into action. Mounted guards trotted their horses back and forth, the crowds surging back to escape the flying hoofs. Other guards mounted the sidewalks to keep the throng moving. Flying wedges of police hurled themselves into the throngs, capturing leaders of the agitation.

Only scattered resistance was offered, most of the crowd retreating before the police charges, though there were many fist fights.

Forced off the Place de l'Opera as motor trucks roared up with fresh forces of mobile guards and police, the demonstrators moved into the boulevards, shouting:

"On to the Place de la Concorde!"

It was there that most of the Stavisky rioters who died in the troubled days of February, 1934, shed their blood.

By the United Press.

Paris, July 19.—Steel-helmeted mounted Republican guards tonight drafted gendarmes from the boulevards, swept into the Place de l'Opera and arrested 1,200 persons demonstrating against Premier Laval's economy decrees. More than 12,000 disgruntled government employes were dispersed.

George M. Van Horn kisses his bride, the former Rose B. Wallace, while the Rev. Pierce S. Ellis gives his blessing.

Not exactly in the dashing style of young Lochinvar but on horses, anyway, were George M. Van Horn, of 1359 Harvard street northwest, and Rose B. Wallace, of 3604 Eleventh street northwest, when they were married last night.

As a wag of the wedding said, "horses were used to put a new kick into an old ceremony," so the pair were wed by the Rev. Pierce S. Ellis, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Alexandria, Va., astride their prancing mounts.

The scene was Memorial Circle, Alexandria, and the ceremony was performed to the cacophony of automobile horns.

In all there were 12 mounted guests at the wedding. The minister refused to mount a nag to perform the ceremony.

After the ceremony the wedding party cantered back to Washington, where a barn dance climaxed the wedding events. This morning, the bride, a Census Bureau worker, and the bridegroom, an auto shop foreman, hope to be back on the job, job.

Patriots Form Ethiopia Units To Fight Italy

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Addis Ababa, July 19.—Tribesmen in the high hills and on the torrid lowlands of Ethiopia—men, women and even children, Christians and infidels—today rallied to Emperor Haile Selassie's appeal for their blood in defense of his empire.

Answering the call of the conquering lion of Judah before his parliament and troops yesterday, the blacks further demonstrated unity in the face of a threatened Italian invasion by organizing civilian support for the military.

Loyal subjects of the King of Kings, resenting home propaganda that border tribes will desert to Italy organized the "Patriotic Society for Love of Country." Already 173 branches have been founded in all parts of Ethiopia to "foster defense and unity of the country."

"Love of Country" is embroidered on the green band of the khaki cap worn by members. Membership includes civilians, army officers and priests. Likye Gabra Christos, leading Ethiopian church dignitary, is president. Christians and disciples of Islam are enrolled beneath its banner.

Tribal chiefs, religious leaders and military commanders pledged their all to the emperor in resisting attempts to conquer Ethiopia or make the country an Italian protectorate.

U. S. Watchful Of Nazis' War Upon Catholics

Reichsfuehrer Adolph Hitler's latest campaign against religious groups in Germany, particularly the Catholic Church, yesterday brought expressions of regret and condemnation on Capitol Hill and caused some concern in Administration circles, althought comment in that quarter was withheld.

State Department attaches said they were taking no official notice of Hitler's actions because they were purely domestic in nature. But it was known that the department's European experts kept a close eye on all that was developing in Germany and feared the edict against the Catholics as a further obstacle to cordiality between the two countries.

The State Department, however, revealed that it would be prompt to protect the rights of any American citizens that may become involved with German officials as a result of the campaign against religious groups.

Douglas Jenkins, American consul-general at Berlin, reported to the department that he had visited M. C. Harbeck, American citizen and representative of the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, who was arrested Thursday by German secret police. The latter said they suspected him of sending money out of the country contrary to exchange regulations and of continuing activities with the forbidden Bible Students Society.

Jenkins, in his report yesterday,

Drastic Edict Hits Criticism in Pulpit

The German Situation.

Gen. Hermann Goering ordered his secret police to church Sunday, presaging wholesale arrest of Catholic clergy.

Secret police dissolved the Steel Helmet veterans' organization in Thuringia and the greater part of Silesia. Members were accused of derogatory remarks regarding formation of the Nazi Party and state authorities.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Berlin, July 19.—Gen. Herman Goering today ordered his secret police to church Sunday, presaging wholesale arrests of Catholic clergy if they violate his drastic edict that the pulpit must refrain from criticism of Nazi policies.

The drive to force the church into line, even to accepting Interior Minister Wilhelm Frick's sterilization laws, was accompanied by intensification of the anti-Semitic campaign.

Count Wolf von Helldorf, organizer of several of the earliest anti-Semitic demonstrations, was appointed chief of Berlin police, succeeding Magnus von Levetzow, who submitted his resignation to Frick.

Youths, apparently celebrating the appointment of Von Helldorf, late tonight staged more anti-Semitic demonstrations on the Kurfuerstendam.

They shouted anti-Jewish slogans and beat Jewish cafe patrons. Police reinforcements appeared. They ordered the crowds to "keep moving' and dispersed the demonstrators.

Rigid Jew Policy Set.

With Goering determined the Catholic and Protestant clergy must "not invoke God against this state," Helldorf was charged with more rigid application of the Nazis' anti-Semitic policy—by legal means.

Helldorf and Goering will be backed by Hans Kerrl, newly appointed cabinet minister in charge of church affairs, a bitter anti-Jew.

Minister of Propaganda Paul Joseph Goebels, conferring with Helldorf and high Nazi officials, agreed that henceforth Berlin police will co-operate closely with the Nazi Party in efforts to "defeat Communist subversive activities, reactionary movements and Bolshevist Jewish arrogance."

Sunday Sermons Waited.

Helldorf, formerly Potsdam police chief, was arrested in 1931 after large-scale anti-Semitic demonstrations on the Kurffuerstendamm. Then police attacked Nazi demonstrators, not yet in power, with hard rubber truncheons. However, he is expected to oppose violence by Storm Troopers in campaigns against the Jews.

Police Raid LaFontaine's Place, Find Equipment, No Gambling

Eight Loiterers in Notorious Nearby 'Club' Not Molested; Reports of Reopening Bring Orders for Rigid Supervision in Future.

Armed raiders swooped down on Jimmy LaFontaine's "place" yesterday, searched the building from ground floor to attic and questioned eight men they found congregated around alleged racing paraphernalia, but made no arrests.

The posse, composed of Prince Georges County commissioners and policemen, had been aroused by newspaper articles which stated that the notorious Maryland gambling "spot" once more was in operation.

When they arrived at Jimmy's, they found the establishment almost as lifeless as Old Mother Hubbard's deserted cupboard.

The raiders were led by Prince Georges County Commissioners Vinton D. Cockey and Harry McNamee. These officials have the special titles of police commissioners.

Cockey and McNamee were acting on reports they had heard concerning the place, they said.

En route to LaFontaine's, they stopped at the Hyattsville police station and picked up Policemen Albert Anderson, Warren Peake and Edward Merson.

As the party pulled up the new road to LaFontaine's, McNamee observed a man at the gate. He signaled the officers to duck, and then drove rapidly to the door, where another man apparently stood guard.

"We're all commissioners," McNamee told the second man. "Let us in."

After hesitating, the man admitted the raiders.

On the first floor the raiders found refrigerators and equipment for serving soft drinks for a large crowd, McNamee said.

The second floor was occupied by offices and bedrooms. No one was discovered there, but from the floor above came the sound of voices.

On the third floor was an enormous room, completely outfitted for gaming purposes, McNamee asserted.

There were racing charts and scoreboards, radios and telephones. Around the equipment loitered eight men.

"There may have been several more," said McNamee last night, "but we counted at least eight."

The men were not engaged in any sort of gambling, he added. The commissioners and the police took their names, but made no arrests and placed no charges.

"The place looked like it was all ready to operate," said McNamee.

His 1932 Chicken Dinner Host At Issue With Roosevelt Plans

By the Associated Press.

Waterloo, Nebr., July 19.—Gus Sumnick, Nebraska farmer who won fame as President Roosevelt's "chicken dinner" host in 1932, today took issue with one of the New Deal's pet projects.

Gus doesn't like a Federal relief colonization project which Federal authorities established in the same school district with him.

He thinks the cost of educating the children of the 150 or 200 transplanted city families may raise the taxes on his sizable land holdings about $5 an acre. So he wrote Congressman Charles McLaughlin (Democrat), Nebraska, of Omaha, the following letter:

"Dear Friend:

"I thought I would write you a few lines to let you know that we have not forgotten you. We are very busy on the farm now. Corn is fair, about ten days late. Wheat is poor. Oats not very good. But there will be lots of feed.

"In School District 24, Douglas County, the Government bought 800 acres of land for colonization and settled it with 150 to 200 families. Will have about 300 children of school age. They intend to tax our land in the district to educate these children, and they say it will cost us about $5 an acre. Now, that would be confiscation, for our taxes are high already. It seems the Government agents are trying to put something over on us. (I have 480 acres in District 24.) I hope you will find time to help us out in this matter.

"It seems the Government agents don't give a —— for us farmers as long as they draw a big salary. (All well at home.)

"Wishing you and your family the best of luck, I am your friend

"GUS SUMNICK.

"P. S.—The colonization project looks to us like a white elephant."

Raskob's Comstock Lode Plan Revives Nevada Mine Fever

By the Associated Press.

Reno, Nev., July 19.—Mining fever ran high in Nevada again today.

Long dormant hopes for a revival of activities were stirred by plans of John J. Raskob and other financiers to operate the once fabulously rich gold and silver properties in the historic Comstock lode.

Reports here were that the Raskob group would give the romantic old silver and gold area a $400,000 financial transfusion.

Visions of new wealth pouring from the desolate flank of Mount Davidson, under which the great Comstock lode lies in the Gray Hills 22 miles southeast of here, were conjured up by those who recalled the tough and gaudy days of the "bonanza kings."

After its discovery in 1859, the Comstock lode and other Nevada mining regions sent out gold and silver which helped sustain the credit of the Union during the Civil War.

Now in the new era of reconstruction silver has been looked upon by some experts as an agency for rehabilitating buying power.

Under the 1934 silver purchase act, the United States Treasury is authorized to purchase silver until the Treasury supply equals one-fourth the value of Treasury gold, or until the silver price reaches the old statutory figure of $1.29 an ounce.

Announcement that Raskob and associates planned to merge four of the big mines in the heart of the Comstock increased the returning spirit of confidence noticeable there since the Government launched its silver policy.

The total Comstock producton has been estimated at from $450,000,000 to $700,000,000. The mines went so deep that miners became known as "the boys who are chasing the dollar to the gates of hell."

New Liquor Bill To End Rackets Is House Claim

Federal Control Held Vital to Protect Consumers From Bootlegger.

By the Associated Press.

A blast against entrance of the "bootlegger and racketeer" into the "legalized liquor field" was loosed yesterday by the House Ways and Means Committee in an effort to speed action on the new Federal alcohol control law.

In a formal report, the committee asserted that prior to prohibition the States could not prevent "unlawful and deceptive practices" in the liquor business nor "protect their citizens from" the extant "evils." The report added:

"The same situation is true today. During prohibition, unscrupulous persons entered the liqor business with consequences known to all.

"The bootlegger and racketeer have not disappeared from our national life. Under existing Federal law there is no means of keeping criminals from entering the legalized liquor field.

"The Federal Government is powerless to prevent the most notorious criminal from entering into the business.

"The public cannot be protected from unscrupulous advertising, the consumer cannot be protected from deceptive labeling practices; in short, the legalized liquor traffic cannot be regulated, if the door is left open for gangs of criminals and racketeers to enter into the business of liquor production and distribution."

The remedy, the committee held, is the new Federal alcohol control bill, which sets up in the Treasury Department a division known as the Federal Alcohol Control Administration.

It imposes a $10 occupational tax on importers and those who sell liquor in interstate commerce; on distillers, wine producers, brewers, rectifiers, wholesalers and others.

It then directs that permits must be obtained by all distillers, wine producers, rectifiers, blenders, bottlers, warehousemen, importers and wholesalers of distilled spirits, wine or malt beverages.

It stipulates that licenses shall not be issued to "tied houses"—those connected with a brewer or distiller—or to those which mislabel their product or advertise it by belittling a competitor's product.

The bill also forbids interlocking directorates.

In summation, the committee report said:

"The proposed legislation will do much to protect revenue and to prevent recurrence of evils present in the liquor traffic in the past and which no fair-minded citizen wishes to be restored."

Between You and Me

London's Budget Success Draws Wide Favor; Both Parties May Back Senator Couzens.

By Raymond Clapper

ONE trouble with a good many people who are denouncing everything President Roosevelt is doing is that they have little to suggest as an alternative. Even in States where criticism of the Federal Administration is most severe, little is being done to set an example—except a bad one.

The tendency in most States is to coast along under the protection of heavy Federal relief and AAA expenditures and imitate the Federal spending theory.

One Governor, however, has been smart enough to see that while the Federal Government was pumping out such heavy expenditures there was an opportunity for Governors to tighten the belt and get State affairs down to bedrock. He is Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas. He is not an old dealer. On the contrary, for a Republican he has been quite friendly—very much the same as Senator Capper.

Landon's distinction is that, in a time when public spending has become a political mania, when States have inflated their land assessments to fantastic levels in order to sustain heavy bond issues, when borrowing power has been blown up to the limit, he has been using the paring knife—not just talking about doing it. Very little has been heard about it. That is because Governor Landon is not a spectacular man. He is a business man, an oil man, but an operating one, not stock promoter. Medium sized, serious, a toiler rather than an actor, he is so undramatic that his Kansas friends can't even picture him as a second Coolidge and make it sound exciting.

Perhaps it was just as well because after nearly three years of steady labor, he has some results which speak for themselves more convincingly than any assumed political acrobatics could. This record is causing Republicans to consider Landon as a presidential prospect and has led numbers of groups to shower him with invitations to speak about the country.

State budget balanced . . . Costs held within income . . . taxes reduced . . . Per capita cost of government cut from $71 in 1929 to $51 . . . General property taxes decreased 32 per cent . . . State and local revenues reduced from $124,000,000 to $97,000,000 . . . Local bonded indebtedness reduced $22,000,000 and only $5,000,000 in new bond obligations issued between 1932 and 1934.

All of this Landon was able to do by putting through three laws in 1933 and then carrying them into effect:

1. Cash basis law—prohibits taxing units from spending more than they take in.

2. Tax limitations law—to hold down levying of taxes.

3. Budget publicity—requiring all taxing units to publish budgets of future needs and compelling them to live within those budgets.

It looks simple. But anyone who has attempted to cut jobholders off the pay roll knows that it isn't as simple as it looks.

Political Parade: Senator Couzens, of Michigan, may get both the Democratic and Republican nominations next year. He already has the Republican nomination and the Democrats are talking seriously of making it unanimous . . . Frank Murphy, American High Commissioner in the Philippine Islands and former Mayor of Detroit, may be asked to return and be the Democratic candidate for Governor of Michigan next year . . . A group of influential Republican business men is collecting funds on its own to give auxiliary aid to the party. The real extent of the Republican activity will no longer be measured by the activity of the Republican national committee . . . One curious thing about the demand in Congress for adjournment is that the hard-working leaders, who have the best reason for wanting to quit and who would like to, are bound by loyalty to continue on uncomplainingly. The clamor for quitting comes from the rank and file who, after all, have it fairly easy. After all, the life of the rank-and-filer in Congress is bearable. Chambers of both houses are air-conditioned. Some parts of the office buildings are cooled. Senators and Representatives live well, find time for golfing and fishing while their secretaries handle the inquiries from constituents . . . A Senator or Representative finds it easy to be "out." If he wants to play golf his secretary can inform inquirers that the member is at the Government departments on official business or, if Congress is sitting, that the member is "on the floor," which may mean anything from taking an afternoon nap in the cloakroom to getting away from it all at the nineteenth hole a dozen miles from the burning pavements of Pennsylvania avenue . . . Recently published statistics that arrests for drunken driving are lower than during prohibition, although issued under private auspices, were collected by one of the Government agencies. After the data were assembled, it was decided not to issue it officially and it was passed to private groups . . . . When Senator J. Hamilton Lewis revived the proposal that Great Britain give us Jamaica and other western Atlantic islands in satisfaction of old claims one of his colleagues whispered, "The Senator must be running against George."

Jesse Jones, chairman of RFC, whose solvency is the envy of other administrations, was expanding on the record of his agency at a press conference when a reporter observed that on his watch fob he wore a rabbit's foot.

"Does that rabbit's foot explain how you came out $100,000,000 ahead?" the reporter asked.

Excess Profits Tax Proposal Gains Support

Doughton Favors Levy on Corporate Earnings Over 10 Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.

The possibility that a stiff tax on corporations making more than 10 per cent profit might be written into the new tax bill grew apace yesterday with intensified Ways and Means Committee perusal of the measure.

Simultaneously, Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, asserted he would "struggle" to get the bill finally approved next week by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Doughton, himself, was one of those seriously considering — and obviously in favor of—the excess profits tax in place of the graduated tax on corporation incomes proposed by the President. He said he had no idea of the President's attitude, but indications were that Mr. Roosevelt would be asked directly to approve the change.

At present, each corporation is allowed to declare the "adjusted" value of its capital stock. On its total income it pays a 13¾ per cent tax. On all income over 12½ per cent, it pays an extra 5 per cent.

No Limit in Mind.

Doughton indicated that he thought a 12½ per cent profit was a little high under present business conditions.

A number of committeemen were talking about dropping the 12½ to 10 per cent or thereabouts. They suggested, too, that the tax on profits of more than 10 per cent start at about 5 per cent and increase in proportion to the profit. No definite top limit was in mind.

Estimates of how much revenue such a levy would produce had not yet been prepared, but under existing law $5,208,000 was brought into the Treasury last year with a 5 per cent tax on profits over 12½ per cent.

After a two-hour session yesterday in which problems connected with the new inheritance tax plan were discussed at length, the committee recessed until Monday.

Individual Incomes Eyed.

In their study of the tax situation, members were concentrating on new individual income rates which would not touch incomes under $100,000 or $150,000, but put heavier levies on those over $1,000,000.

At present, the maximum tax rate —which applies to all income over $1,000,000—is 63 per cent, including both the normal and surtax rate. The committee is giving particular study to a new plan which would put a 73 per cent tax on all income from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000.

The rates then would progress 1 per cent upward for each extra $1,000,000 to 76 per cent on income between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 and an extra 1 per cent for each additional $2,500,000 to a maximum of 79 per cent on income over $10,000,000.

5 Men Get $48,000 At Chester Holdup

Trailing Police Find Their Near Philadelphia.

By the United Press.

Chester, Pa., July 19.—Five bandits, one armed with a sub-machine gun, who held up a branch of the Delaware County National Bank here today and escaped with $48,000 in cash were objects of a wide search tonight.

The robbery, one of the largest in recent years, was staged with precision and took less than five minutes to carry out. The bandits made a clear getaway toward Philadelphia. Included in the loot was a $25,000 payroll of the Philadelphia Electric Co.

The bandits' automobile was found abandoned in Yeadon, a suburb at the edge of Philadelphia, some time after the robbery and gave rise to the relief that the men had fled into the city with their rich haul. The bandits worked coolly and methodically. Three had entered the bank. They wore dark gloves to avoid leaving any fingerprints. Occasionally they held handkerchiefs over their faces.

One carried a sub-machine gun and the other two had pistols.

D. A. V. Rally Asks Payment of Bonus

Patman Tells Convention of 'Reasonable Hope.'

By the Associated Press.

New Haven, Conn., July 19.—The Disabled American Veterans adopted a resolution tonight favoring the immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus in cash after Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, had told their National convention there was a "reasonable hope" that such legislation still would be enacted by the present Congress.

Drafted by a special committee of which Patman was a member, the resolution was approved by a viva voce vote in the face of strenous opposition led by Joe McQueen, of St. Louis, Mo., former past National Commander.

The delegates, acting speedily after hearing from Patman, author of the bonus bill vetoed by President Roosevelt, squelched two attempts to sidetrack the resolution.

First they defeated by a rising vote of 73 to 66 a motion to table it; and then, with some of the delegates clamoring for a postponement of the vote until tomorrow, shut off further debate on the issue by approving a motion for the previous question.

Bar Convention Elects Ransom, Flays New Deal

'73 Midget Courts' in Capital Blamed for 'Unjustified Situation.'

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 19.—William Lynn Ransom, of New York City, was elected president of the American Bar Association in spirited balloting today over James M. Beck, former United States Solicitor General, who in a keynote address called for a halt in asserted centralization of government.

Beck was put forward suddenly in the closing sessions of the convention. The nominating committee had submitted Ransom's name and moved that nominations be closed. Beck's name then was offered and a motion to reject it was lost. Ransom won, 209 to 178.

It was the first time in the 58 years' history of the Bar Association that there had been a contest over the presidency.

The association went on record as pledging itself to oppose vigorously alterations in the essential lines of the American Constitution by the "process of corruption of its text."

Although the resolution did not mention the New Deal by name it said:

"If the legislative, executive and judicial branches are to be changed, let it be by constitutional amendment, so that the people will know on what issue they are voting."

Existing Plan Attacked.

"The present situation can not be right and can not be justified. We should not have some 73 midget courts in Washington, most of them exercising legislative and executive as well as judicial power.

"A brake must be put on this contagious fever for placing businesses under a license system, such as was attempted in the NIRA and the AAA and such as is now being attempted in bills pending before Congress."

Beck, known as an authority on constitutional law, in his report on American citizenship had urged cessation of "centralized government" and replacement of present-day trends with sturdy independence by States.

Louis G. Caldwell, of Washington, former counsel for the Federal Radio Commission, in a report aimed sharp darts of criticism at "despotism, bureaucracy and administrative usurpation of legislative and judicial power," but did not link any of the criticism to the New Deal by name.

Brake Held Necessary.

Caldwell declared a "brake must be put on this contagious fever for placing business under a license system, such as was attempted in the NRA and the AAA, and such as is now being attempted in bills before Congress."

C. Rush Butler, of Chicago, chairman of the committee on commerce, said: "Business needs an authoritative definition of the proper limits of co-operative action under anti-trust laws, which it was the purpose of the NRA to provide." Butler said that only Congress and the Legislature can give such definition.

The divorce question brought recommendations for uniformity of laws and amendment of the law requiring long residence in a State before filing a divorce action. Such action, their advocates said, would eliminate the foreign, including Mexican, divorce problem.

Other officers elected by the association were John H. Voorhees, Sioux Falls, S. Dak., treasurer (re-elected); William P. McCracken, jr., Washington, D. C., secretary (re-elected); J. H. Corbitt, Suffolk, Va.; Jacob M. Lashly, St. Louis, Mo., and S. T. Bassil, Milwaukee, members of the executive council. District vice presidents chosen included Claire Bird, Wausau, Wisc.; J. Weston, Allen, Boston; E. J. Daly, Hartford, Conn.; Charles L. Miller, Lancaster, Pa.; Robert Turnstall, Richmond, Va.; Murray Shoemaker, Cincinnati; Forney Johnston, Birmingham, Ala., and George Rhodes, Shelbyville, Ill.

Los Angeles, July 19 (U.P.).—The American Bar Association tonight stepped into the fight now boiling in Congress over agricultural adjustment act process levies, voting unanimously a resolution opposing "final pasage of any law which would prevent court action to collect refunds on AAA processing taxes."

George Maurice Morris, of Washington, chairman of the group, offered the report and the resolution, which was adopted by a rising vote.

Tobacco Trade First to Adopt Volunteer Code

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Marking the first effort that has neared completion to retain in force voluntarily the invalid NRA codes, the wholesale tobacco distributors industry yesterday agreed on a set of fair trade practice rules at a conference with representatives of the Federal Trade Commission.

The rules agreed upon were presented to the trade commission for its approval and when approved and formally promulgated will have the binding effect of law as regards fair trade practices. Included in the agreement is acceptance of the hours, wages and working condition provisions of the industry's former NRA code.

The latter, however, constitute nothing more than a voluntary agreement within the industry to observe hour, wage and other working standards, and any failure to live up to these provisions can not be enforced by law. The NRA code for the wholesale tobacco distributors industry called for a basic 40-hour week, with a minimum wage of $16 weekly in cities over 500,000 population and a minimum wage of $11 weekly in small towns and villages.

Compact Shows the Way.

The agreement presented to the trade commission by the tobacco distributors aroused interest because it indicates the type of compact possible to keep some of the NRA principles in effect. It is the first to be laid before the commission, which is expected to approve it, since the NRA was struck down by the Supreme Court.

Prior to that tribunal's action, the trade commission had given its approval to about 150 agreements of this type, designed to assure an observance of fair trade practices. None of these, however, contained any reference to working provisions. Approximately 20 requests or informal applications for agreements of the type presented yesterday have been made to the commission.

The agreement was initiated by the National Association of Tobacco Distributors, representing 96 per cent of the industry, with an investment of $150,000,000, annual sales volume of $1,000,000,000 and 60,000 employes. This organization has accepted the agreement and thus, when approved, it will constitute an agreement between all members of the association.

Legally Binding On All.

But the unfair trade practices approved by the trade commission will be legally binding on the 4 per cent of the industry outside of the association because, in general, they are now prohibited by law or orders of the trade commission. Their inclusion in an agreement adapts the generally recognized unfair trade practices to the tobacco distributors industry and invites the active cooperation of that industry for their enforcement.

In view of reports of price-cutting in cigarettes and their use as "loss leaders," the first rule in the agreement was regarded as important. It provides that "the practice of using nationally advertised and well known brands of cigarettes, tobacco products or allied lines as 'loss leaders' to influence the sale of other well known merchandise, the sale of which merchandise is used to recoup the loss sustained on the said brands of cigarettes, tobacco products or allied lines with the tendency or capacity to deceive or mislead purchasers or prospective purchasers, is an unfair trade practice."

Differs From NRA Provision.

This is not the same prohibition against "loss leaders" as the NRA codes contained. Moreover, some doubt was raised in trade commission circles last night whether that agency will not modify this proposed rule, because the courts in many decisions have held the use of loss leaders to be an unfair trade practice only where they are used to destroy a competitor or to promote a monopoly.

The seller of "loss leaders," however, might be reached under another rule in the agreement which embodies these judicial principles and which declares that "the selling of products of the industry below cost, with the intent and with the effect of injuring a competitor and where the effect may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly or unreasonably restrain trade, is an unfair trade practice."

The rule defines "cost" to mean the invoice or replacement cost, whichever is lower, of the article in question, plus the distributor's or vendor's cost of doing business.

The remainder of the unfair trade practice rules prohibit deliberate interference with contracts of competitors or seeking to have them breached, the granting of rebates, false advertising, misrepresentations, discrimination among customers, bribery of employes or agents of prospective purchasers and similar well-recognized unfair trade practices.

Another rule, which is voluntary and lacks the force of law, would require wholesale tobacco distributors selling in States having a State tax on cigarettes to add the full face value of such tax stamps on all sales made to retailers within such State and would prohibit the granting of any discount on this account.

Post Poll Shows House Favors Adjourning, 2-1

20 Senators Vote to Quit, 15 Against; Ballots Now Total 196.

Members of the House were voting more than 2 to 1 for adjournment in The Washington Post's poll of Congress yesterday.

Questionnaires asking members of the House and Senate how they felt about going home without passing a tax bill and as soon as legislation in conference is completed, were mailed out by The Post early this week.

With replies to the questionnaire continuing to arrive, a summary of the poll showed:

For adjournment in the House, 102; against, 44; noncommittal, 3, and in the Senate, for, 20; against, 15. Total congressional membership voting was 196, with 12 Congressmen submitting replies that could not be identified as coming from either House.

Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), Massachusetts, in replying to the questionnaire by letter, called upon Congress to "adjourn and stop the mad rush of legislation which doubtless is unconstitutional."

"No drastic tax bill should be passed without careful and complete study," she added.

One member of the House who returned his questionnaire unsigned wrote that he felt "any laws we can pass now will not do the good to the country that this adjournment will," while another, also unidentifiable, said he felt "the President should get all he can of what he wants now."

Senator John H. Overton, of Louisiana, was counted in the affirmative, though he deleted that portion of the statement upon which the poll was taken that referred to deferring tax legislation until later in the year.

John H. Dingell (Democrat), of Michigan, was the only House opponent of adjournment to sign his name to questionnaire returned yesterday.

Senators Down Measure to Bar AAA Tax Suits

ing and licensing of shippers of fruit were held unconstitutional in Houston, Tex., by Federal District Judge T. M. Kennerly, according to Associated Press.

The court denied Secretary of Agriculture Wallace an injunction to restrain the Rio Valley Fruit & Vegetable Co. from shipping grapefruit and oranges out of the section. The Supreme Court's Schechter case decision was cited by Judge Kennerly.

At the same time a District judge at Sherman, Tex., granted an injunction against enforcement of the Bankhead cotton control act, according to Associated Press dispatches.

And from the floor of the Senate, Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, announced that his State will file suit to prevent the Federal Government from setting up boards within the State for disbursement of funds.

A one-year extension of the Bankhead cotton control act has been incorporated in the AAA amendments now before the Senate.

Denies Tax Power.

Judge Randolph Bryant, of Sherman, called the Bankhead act "only a very thinly disguised attempt to regulate the production of cotton under the pretext of the exercise of the taxing powers of the national Government."

"This power," he said, "if it exists at all, is not committed to the national Government under the terms of the Constitution of the United States, but is expressly reserved to the States."

Senator John H. Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, author of the Bankhead act, had vigorously assailed the George compromise in the Senate yesterday as opening the Treasury to "raids" that might run up to as much as $1,000,000,000.

"I am much astonished that my very good friend (Bankhead) should be exercised about this matter," reported Senator George.

$1,000,000,000 Raid.

"If his sympathies were exercised on the other side of the question, I might be able to understand it. He concludes argument here with the admonition that we are about to involve the Treasury in a liability of $1,000,000,000 already paid, and yet we have been constantly reminded that all processing taxes have been passed on to the consumer, and under the amendment which is offered by way of substitute, and solely for the purpose of preventing duplication in language, no taxpayer who has passed on the tax can recover a dime from the Treasury."

George said that the amendment, which was worked out by a Senate coalition led by Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, "does not altogether suit me." The Georgian said he would prefer a provision that the Federal Government must "face the consequences" wherever it levies a tax it has no authority to impose.

Senator Robinson asked if George would favor permitting recovery, even though the taxes were passed on.

Glorious for Lawyers.

"In the long run it would be better for the Government to do it, rather than to deny the citizen a right to go into the courts," George replied.

"I would not open the Government to every possible cause of action, but when the Government runs its hands down into the pocket of an American taxpayer and says to him, 'you can not have your day in court,' it is dishonest; it is not only dishonest, it is undemocratic, and I will go further: No free Government can last if once that policy has been adopted."

Senator Robinson, who earlier told reporters the George compromise was a "dangerous" amendment, commented it was "a glorious day for the lawyers."

Two hours earlier today, Robinson still was in some doubt whether the Senate can complete action on the AAA amendments before the week-end recess.

Further attempts to modify price fixing provisions of the measure will be attempted this morning, and Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, may try to attach a silver rider to the measure.

Reported Favorably.

The McCarran rider, favorably reported by the Senate Agriculture Committee, would repeal nationalization provisions of the silver purchase act, withdraw the 50 per cent silver tax, and deny authority to prohibit trading in the white metal. The Nevadan believes the measure would aid in lifting silver prices to $1.29 an ounce.

Rejection yesterday of the Copeland amendment to remove processing taxes on any commodity when its prices reached parity, left intact the Administration's proposal merely to modify the tax when parity levels are reached.

The bill now permits Secretary Wallace to levy processing taxes of 20 per cent of the parity price if the farm price is equal to or not more than 20 per cent above the parity price. If the farm price exceeds by more than 20 per cent the parity price, a processing tax of 10 per cent of the parity price could be levied.

Missing Witness Is Given Funds By Silverman

N. Y. Lawyer Tells Army Lobby Inquiry of Cash Given Fugitive.

By the Associated Press.

A guarded admission that a fugitive from Justice Department agents received funds periodically from a big dealer in excess Army goods was obtained yesterday by the House Military Committee.

It was drawn from Thomas Jefferson Ryan, New York attorney, friend and former counsel of Joseph Silverman, jr., son of a Russian immigrant, who developed a huge business in surplus Army supplies.

The fugitive was identified only as Frank Speicher, sought last year for a grand jury investigation of War Department business transactions. Silverman's negotiations with the department figured in the inquiry.

While Chairman McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, refreshed his memory with names and dates, Ryan puffing on a cigarette told of six or eight times he or one of his clerks gave money furnished by Silverman to a young New York lawyer, Harold Schneuer, allegedly acting for Speicher.

Repeatedly Ryan denied he knew definitely Speicher was obtaining the money, delivered to the attorney by messenger. He said he did not know Speicher's whereabouts, although he talked with him several times over the phone and advised him to give himself up.

The long-sought witness was described at the time of the grand jury inquiry as the representative of a tire company which had tried to sell the War Department a large quantity of "leak-proof" tubes.

Returning later to the money McSwain quickly asked:

"Where did the money come from?"

"It came from Silverman," Ryan said. "Every dollar Speicher got came from Silverman."

Then he told how he participated in the transfer of funds at the instance of Silverman and his counsel, A. Mitchell Palmer, United States Attorney General in the Wilson Administration. Each time, he said, the envelopes contained not less than $100 in cash.

He contended he was given to understand the money was a fee for Schneuer, who he thought was giving Silverman information which eventually reached the Military Committee for use in its inquiry last year into War Department business practices.

As the committee started its inquiry again on Thursday, Silverman denied he had paid money to Speicher while the latter was in hiding. He said the money given to Schneuer was for information to be handed over to the committee.

McSwain told Ryan sharply it was "remarkable" the attorney never had told the Department of Justice anything about Speicher.

"I was informed and still believe," Ryan answered, "that you were getting information from Speicher.

Women Shirt-Makers Striking for Higher Wage

Parley Monday May End Strike At Alexandria

The first actual step toward settlement of Alexandria's most exciting strike in years was taken late yesterday when a peace conference was scheduled for 2 p. m. Monday.

At that time Howard T. Colvin, Labor Department conciliation commissioner, will bring together Morris Weinman, shirt manufacturer, and representatives of his 105 striking employes — all women — in an effort to settle their dispute over wages and hours.

Colvin arranged the conference yesterday, the fifth day of the walkout, while the aroused women workers picketed the ramshackle Alexandria plant where they struck rather than submit to a 49-hour week at a wage averaging $7 to $8 weekly.

Mayor Backs Strikers.

Earlier Weinman, whose home and central office are in Baltimore, visited the factory at Columbus and Wilkins streets and was greeted with a chorus of boos. Angered, he called police. Mayor Emmett C. Davison responded to the summons, expressing his sympathy with the women's demands and inviting them to apply to the city welfare agency if relief was needed.

"I'm concerned because they enjoy no decent working conditions and they are entirely justified in fighting for a living wage," said the mayor, who is general secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Machinists, with offices at Washington headquarters.

Owner of the Century Manufacturing Co. in Alexandria and of other shirt factories in Fredericksburg, Va., and on the Maryland Eastern Shore, Weinman has cut his Alexandria employes' pay three times since the NRA codes were killed by the Supreme Court.

Or, as Mrs. Reba Donald, leader of the organized band of women, puts it:

Cheerful But Determined.

"Before NRA the average wage was about $7 or $8 a week. When the codes came in we made $12 or so, working 36 hours a week. We all do piece-work, so much per hundred shirts, sewing on buttons.

"When NRA ended we were given two pay reductions in one week. First the work week was lengthened to 40 hours, then to 44. We walked out when he wanted to put us on a 49-hour week at less money per 100 shirts!"

Cheerful but determined, the band of strikers kept vigil at the plant throughout yesterday to see that no one returned to work. Nor were trucks allowed to stop and pick up shipments. When a motor carrier backed up to the entrance, the women formed a human barrier and pretty soon the driver, convinced he could not enter, departed.

A motorcycle policeman looked on good-humoredly.

Miss Virginia Lowry, an organizer from the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in Baltimore, mingled with the workers to keep up their morale. They are attempting to form a local in Alexandria.

They are willing to return to work if guaranteed $12 for a 40-hour week. This is the demand which will be laid before Monday's conference.

Narcotics Kill 'Woman Ponzi' In Paris Prison

Mme. Hanu, Get-Rich-Quic Wizard, Was Serving 3-Year Term.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 19.—An overdose of narcotics, taken in her jail cell, today ended the spectacular financial career of Mme. Marthe Hanu, "financial wizard" and the "woman Ponzi" of Paris.

Police immediately opened an investigation to determine how the narcotics reached the cell, in which she had spent six months of the three-year sentence imposed upon her at her last trial for swindling.

A report from the Fresnes prison said Mme. Hanau, whose get-rich-quick schemes drew francs from the socks of thousands of small savers throughout France, had been unconscious since she took the overdose today.

One of the most colorful characters in the nation's oft-troubled financial world, Mme. Hanu hobnobbed with government leaders, financiers and other notables at the height of her career. At one time she operated a bank with 400 branches in France.

She published two journals which she used to advance her ideas, the Gazette du Franc and Forces. The latter, which she continued to direct from prison, gave financial tips and often exposed scandals before they reached the ears of the authorities.

It was Forces, however, which brought her back into contact with the law after her conviction with her former husband, Lazare Bloch, in March, 1931, on charges of swindling. At that time she was given two years in prison, but was released because she had been behind bars since 1928 awaiting trial.

A secret report of the prefect of police concerning Mme. Hanau's activities appeared in the newspapers and Pierre-Etienne Flandin, then minister of finance, claimed it had been stolen.

Back in the hands of police, she started a hunger strike that lasted 13 days, focused the attention of all France upon her and finally got her taken to a hospital. She escaped, however, and returned to the prison. There she got her old cell back and immediately renewed her hunger strike.

In one room the party found two double-barreled shotguns and a rifle, the commissioners said. Outside about eight automobiles were parked.

"All the answers we got to our questions were vague," McNamee said.

"We're going to watch the place closely from now on."

Perry Boswell, president of the board of county commissioners, said La Fontaine's "would not open a gambling joint, even if we have to get a new police force."

However, he added that he "felt sure the present force would cooperate" in the campaign to keep the establishment free from gambling.

Boswell also said that one of the men found in the place, whose name he did not obtain, said he was going to open a lunchroom there and showed a license he had taken out for that purpose.

Youth Creates Museum In Workshop on Farm

"Eight years ago I borrowed a book on taxidermy from a neighbor and practiced until I got pretty good," explains the young artist, who paints his own background for his mountings.

"Besides practice, that is all the training I received."

Long 'Panics' Gallery, Defies Administration

State Will Dispute PWA Boards in Court, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

Fresh from another legislative triumph in Louisiana, Senator Long returned to the Senate yesterday shouting defiance at the Roosevelt Administration for cutting off PWA funds from his State.

Packed galleries heard Long proclaim that "Louisiana is not in the Roosevelt column, and you couldn't put it there if you spent the whole of $5,000,000,000 down there."

He asserted the State would file suit in the Supreme Court — and would win — to prevent the Federal Government from setting up boards within the State for the disbursement of funds. He said educational boards and other agencies had been created for this purpose "without constitutional authority."

Long amused the galleries which had been packed an hour before he began. But the reaction of Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas, was far from amusement. From a desk just a few feet away, the Texan warned Long angrily:

"Don't get funny with me, either here or any other place."

A few moments earlier Connally had protested that the galleries, which were laughing at some of Long's remarks, were not in order.

"This is not a vaudeville show, though it may seem to be," Connally told the presiding officer.

When Long concluded his speech there was the usual disorder as the spectators pushed toward the doors of the galleries. Connally again protested.

"The show is over," Vice President Garner shouted from the rostrum. "You can get out of the gallery."

Long based his remarks about denial of PWA grants on newspaper reports. He said he had not received the announcement.

"I don't know how the President or Secretary Ickes addresses me," he said, adding that so far as Ickes was concerned "I have no direct diplomatic contact with him."

"Our talking reminds me of a son-in-law and a mother-in-law in Louisiana," he said. "They wouldn't speak to each other, so when they had something to say they would speak to the cat.

"But the State of Louisiana isn't concerned about these dire pronouncements. Now, just five months before our State election, we are told Louisiana is to have no more PWA funds. Last year we allowed five Congressmen to come back here, who, because they were avowedly anti-Long, were to get PWA funds.

"But now it seems, like Benedict Arnold, the deserters will not get their 30 pieces of silver. They have my sympathy, but not my support. They have my sympathy for having, like myself, trusted a certain gentleman once too often."

After denouncing at length what he called the "bureaucratic system," Long concluded:

"Louisiana will run itself. It will not stand for the flats from Washington, nor will it allow itself to be enslaved. We are not afraid of them in any kind of a political campaign."

Grocery Official Accuses Group

J. A. Logan Assails House Investigating Committee.

By the Associated Press.

John A. Logan, executive vice president of the Food & Grocery Chain Stores of America, charged yesterday that letters seized from his files by the House committee investigating a "super-lobby" had been turned over to a wholesale grocery group.

Photostatic copies of the letters, Logan told the House Judiciary Committee, were given out by the United States Wholesale Grocers Association with a statement assailing the National American Wholesale Grocers Association, a rival organization.

Logan said he sent a letter of protest to Chairman Patman (Democrat), Texas, of the investigating committee. His charges were made during the Patman antiprice discrimination bill.

Wins Air Award

CAPT. ALBERT HEGENBERGER.

Hegenberger Wins Aviation's Greatest Prize

Army Captain Will Receive Award for Development of Blind Flying.

The Collier Trophy, highest award in American aviation, will be presented to Capt. Albert Hegenberger, of the Army Air Corps, by President Roosevelt at the White House Monday, it was announced yesterday by the National Aeronautic Association.

Capt. Hegenberger will receive the twentieth award of the trophy, donated in 1911 to stimulate aviation, "for the development and demonstration of a successful blind landing system."

In announcing the winner the committee on awards stated:

"This blind landing system, first demonstrated by Capt. Hegenberger on May 9, 1932, in the world's first solo blind flight in the plane and depending solely upon instruments from take-off to landing, reached complete development and was put into actual use in 1934. It overcomes one of flying's greatest hazards. Adopted not only by the Army Air Corps but also by the Bureau of Air Commerce, it has been accepted as the most practical system developed to date for either military or commercial purposes."

Col. Edgar S. Gorrell, president of the Stutz Motor Car Co., who served as chief of staff of the Army Air Service in the World War, was chairman of the board of judges making the award. Members of the committee included Charles L. Lawrence, Maj. James Doolittle, William B. Stout and Edward Warner.

The Collier Trophy was first awarded in 1911 to Glenn Curtiss. Other winners include Orville Wright, Grover Loening, Charles Lawrence, Glenn Martin and Harold Pitcairn.

Makers of Harness Bows to Machines

By the United Press.

Holland, Mich.—Michigan's only surviving hand harness maker, after half a century in the business, grudgingly admits that the machine is unbeatable.

"You can't compete with it," says Peter Hoeksema. "Why, it makes better, neater, stronger harnesses than can be made by hand—and it takes only half the time." So Hoeksema finally gave in and for the last few years has been doing much of his work on small machines, although he insists—somewhat defiantly—that some of it can be done much better by hand.

Hoeksema started his trade 52 years ago in Holland when harness making by hand was a flourishing industry. Gradually the harness makers were forced to give way before the factory made product, and now he is the only one active.

"When I started I was 16," says Hoekesma, "and harness making was an important business in every town. It looked like a trade that would always be in demand. Nobody ever thought the horse would be displaced by the tractor."

Last year he turned out 32 sets of harness which were sold to farmers in the community, many of whom have used Hoeksema-made harness all their lives.

Youth Practices Jazz On Piano in Church

Springfield, Mo. (U.P.).—Almost any one will agree that notes of jazz music floating out of the third floor windows of a Baptist Church at midnight would appear suspicious. But it wasn't in this case. Frank Pike, 25, told police, whom neighbors had called, that he had received permission to practice on the church piano.

Bill to License Arms Exports Reported Out

By the Associated Press.

Taking one of the first definite actions toward safeguarding American neutrality in the event of any future war, the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday approved a bill requiring the licensing of all munitions exports.

Enactment of the bill is advoacted by neutrality legislation proponents as a necessary prelude to making any neutrality laws effective, and to provide required machinery for carrying out the provisions of the proposed international convention controlling the manufacture, sale and export of arms and munitions of war.

A sub-committee of the Senate foreign relations committee will confer with William hilipps, Acting Secretary of State, and State Department arms experts on other neutrality legislation early next week.

Hull Discusses Bill.

The conference is expected to result in decision on whether any neutrality legislation will be enacted at the present session.

Secretary Hull and Assistant Secretary Moore discussed the general features of the bill with the committee last week. From that talk came a warning to go slow on enactment of neutrality legislation.

None of the bills have the approval of the State Department in their present form. Secretary Hull and Assistant Secretary Moore told committee members that(as now drafted, the bills might seriously interfere with the conduct of foreign relations by committing the United States to a definite course of action, regardless of future circumstances.

Board Is Provided.

The arms licensing bill provides for setting up a national munitions board, consisting of the Secretaries of State, War, Navy, Treasury and Commerce.

Periodically the board would be authorized to determine what constitutes munitions and issue licenses for all shipments.

The board would not be empowered to refuse to issue a license for any shipment, provided the shipper had paid a $500 annual registration fee, but the attendant publicity and unofficial moral persuasion would, it is believed, provide adequate control.

The committee made one major change in the measure, adding an amendment requiring that the list of licenses be kept available for public inspection at all times.

Utilities Official Admits Burning Lobby Evidence

sentative Driscoll (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, whose evidence launched the current Senate investigation, had first spoken to him. Driscoll, however, apparently couldn't wait until the Housee committee could hear him.

The House committee chairman appeared unconcerned over the loss of the witness, however, and expressed the opinion that the Senate committee "hasn't touched on much yet."

Decision in Week.

The House Rules Committee has concluded its investigation of the Administration lobbying for the utility bill, O'Connor said, and will now turn its attention to the utilities. It will be a week, though, before the committee reaches any decision on the charges brought by Representative Brewster (Republican), of Maine.

Brewster told the committee that Thomas Corcoran, RFC counsel, had threatened to stop work on the "Quoddy" dam project if he failed to vote for the "death sentence" clause in the Wheeler-Rayburn bill.

O'Connor predicted that the House inquiry bill will become more effective after adjournment of Congress and will last several months.

Collins, who is a former assistant United States attorney, will open an office in the old House Office Building. While in the district attorney's office Collins was in charge of criminal prosecutions and made a notable record. He will be paid $300 a month.

The Senate lobby committee adjourned subject to call by Chairman Black (Democrat), of Alabama, after hearing Ursil E. Beach, head of the securities department of the Associated Gas & Electric System, assume full responsibility for the destruction of records. He called his action "an error of judgment."

Unconvinced by Beach's willingness to take the blame, Senator Black indicated he would call O. E. Wasser, controller of the A. G. & E. and a director of the system, who is the immediate superior of Beach, and "any others we think necessary."

Beach, who appeared less ill at ease than his subordinates on the witness stand, admitted that he had "discussed" the matter of burning records with Wasser before he issued the order.

"Didn't Say Yes."

Asked what Wasser had to say about the impending order, Beach said: "He didn't say 'yes' and he didn't say 'no.'"

Beach said the reason for the order was two-fold—that the activity against the legislation was over and that the papers might be seized for the congressional inquiry, although "there was nothing in them to be ashamed of."

The Senate inquisitors tried vainly to drag J. L. Mange, president of the Associated Gas & Electric Co., into the background of conferences which preceded the launching of the lobbying drive.

The best they could do was to uncover an Ithaca (N. Y.) conference, at which S. J. McGee, vice president of the Associated company, and other A. G. & E. officials of high rank were present.

Beach said it was at this parley that the campaign was decided upon, but he did not know whether the executives had instructions from higher up.

Senator Black drew sharply conflicting stories from E. W. O'Brien, of Erie, and his subordinate, R. P. Herron, of Warren, regarding conferences held with an attorney in the Wardman Park Hotel.

Displaying an uncanny familiarity with the activities and conversations of the witnesses since they arrived in Washington, Senator Black developed the fact that one George Smith attended the conferences.

While William A. Hill, attorney for the A. G. & E., who also was called to the stand, was vague about Smith's business connections, the Senators frequently referred to him as a "lobbyist for the Associated Gas & Electric Co."

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, made much of the drop in value of common stock of the Associated system from $49 to 49 cents. He said he "had been stuck on ten shares" and that the company hasn't paid a cent of dividends since 1928.

"What good does that $700,000 expenditure for lobbying against the Wheeler-Rayburn bill do for me even if opponents of the bill are right?" he asked Beach.

Beach admitted that dividends had never been paid on the common stock of the company, but said the $700,000 expenditure might lead to an ultimate rise in the value of the stock.

Hill admitted under grilling that the consumer in the final analysis must pay the lobbying bill in increased rates, but Beach said he didn't look at the expenditure that way.

Beach appeared confused by the maze of A. G. & E. System subsidiaries and was unable to state what company signed the checks for the lobbying campaign.

Given $100,000.

He said he was given $100,000 to pay for the inspired telegrams by F. E. Martin, head of "the treasury department" at Ithaca, but he could not tell the committee of what company the department is a part.

Under persistent prodding of Senator Black, Beach admitted that he considered Wasser had given his tacit approval to the order for destruction of all company lobby records before issuing it.

He denied at first and then said he could not remember telling O'Brien to pay for all telegrams in cash with receipts made "to bearer" in order to conceal the origin of the messages. He also denied issuing orders to his branch managers to do all communicating by telephone so as to leave no written records.

"I just didn't want to be bothered with a lot of letters," he said.

"Future Uncertain."

Beach revealed that his organization recently has been engaged almost exclusively in the campaign against the Wheeler-Rayburn bill, as stock sales are inactive, and is now assisting in recapitalizing the system's stock "because we don't know what may happen in the future."

O'Brien was called back to the stand for questioning regarding his reported offer to assist in restoring the Western Union files at Warren, Pa., and in obtaining original signatures for the admittedly faked telegrams.

He admitted that the offer was made, "but not just in that way," and conditional upon Beach's approval. It was rejected by Western Union, however.

He and Herron, questioned at different times, were far apart in their versions of who attended a midnight conference at the Wardman Park Hotel Wednesday night, what was said, and on whether a transcript of the Senate hearing had been read by Hill, the attorney.

Both, however, admitted that their only advice from Hill was "to tell the truth" to the committee.

Among those calling on the former President will be several returning from the American Bar Association convention at Los Angeles.

The guests will include Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland, Patrick Hurley, former Secretary of War on President Hoover's Cabinet, Col. Frank Knox, the Chicago publisher, and James M. Beck, former Solicitor General and former Representative from Pennsylvania.

Hungry Gulls Wreak Havoc on Fruit Farms

Salt Lake City (U.P.).—A local influx of gulls and the consequent competition for food among them has caused fruit farmers of Salt Lake and Utah Valleys great dismay.

Unable to alight on the branches with their webbed feet, the gulls have learned to hover over the trees, beat the fruit down with their wings, and then fly to the ground and feast on the fallen harvest.

The birds have also been observed in the tops of the cherry trees, supporting themselves with outspread wings, devouring all the fruit within reach.

200 Foreign Students Arrive To Find Soviet School Closed

1 From U.S. 'Sore as Hell;' Many Say They Were Deceived.

By the United Press.

Moscow, July 19.—Sprightly young college freshmen and gray-haired postgraduates tonight milled about the lobby of the New Moscow Hotel perplexed as to what to do after traveling 5,000 miles to attend a summer session at Moscow University only to find there was none.

More than 200 prospective students of Soviet life and culture were lured by advertisement of the Soviet travel organization, Intourist. They crossed the ocean, expecting to study a month under leading Soviet professors.

On arrival here they were informed with startling suddenness the school term had been canceled. They were told their professors had been drafted for other state services or were so tired they were unable to work this summer.

Wild rumors circulated.

One said the United States objected to the school because it might implant communism in the minds of American youth.

Another said Soviet officials feared American spies.

Officials denied the rumors.

Most of the students are Communists or Communist sympathizers. They demand their money back on the grounds they were deceived.

A young student from Indianapolis, seeking a doctor's degree, said:

"I am sore as hell. Only about 20 of us are conservatives. We came here expecting to do serious work. The others are a bunch of Communists. They came on a joyride to visit their relatives. On the boat they took the Communist oath and sang the 'Internationale.'"

Radical students were not annoyed. They said there must be some good reason for the cancellation and that they would be quite pleased to travel and see "the great progress of socialism."

A majority of the students are expected to tour Russia in lieu of instruction. The others have been offered some of their money back when they reach Berlin.

Strikers Storm Plant to Keep Men From Jobs

Dakota Packing Firm Scene of Bloody Fight Among Workers.

By the Associated Press.

Sioux Falls, S. D., July 19.—Striking workmen threw a tight picket line about the Morrell Packing Plant late today after 53 persons were injured in a brief but bloody hand-to-hand battle between strikers and workers.

Heads were lacerated and bones broken as the two factions, totaling nearly 400, clashed near the plant gates. The fighting started when non-striking workmen attempted to storm the picket lines to reach their jobs.

Sticks and stones filled the air for five minutes before the strikers drove off the main group of workers. Nearly 100 of the latter were reported to have penetrated the lines and reached the plant.

More than 30 injured were treated at one clinic, and a half dozen others had wounds dressed at a hospital. Several more suffered scratches which required no attention.

Company officials said approximately 350 workers were inside the plant. This force included about 125 office workers who were permitted to pass the picket lines.

The union men walked out suddenly today demanding reinstatement of 29 fellow workers discharged last March after a previous strike at the plant had resulted in calling of National Guardsmen and a declaration of martial law.

John Morrell Foster, secretary of the company, said it would not ask Gov. Tom Berry to call the National Guard.

"We feel," he said, "that the situation should be handled by local authorities. It is up to them to say whether men who want to work should be permitted to do so."

Gov. Berry at Pierre said he would not summon the Guard until Sioux Falls authorities requested aid.

Strike Violence Halts Street Car Operation

By the Associated Press.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, July 19.—Street-car operation was prohibited here tonight after violence from the Omaha tram dispute crossed the Missouri River and brought injury to five persons.

Mayor Hugh Finerty, who single-handed ended rioting here last night after a strike sympathy meeting, barred running of the trams. He also banned mass meetings, pending easing of the situation.

Though strike leaders had warned any outbreak might hurt their cause, scenes reminiscent of three bloody nights of battling in South Omaha last month followed the meeting last night.

Authorities said M. W. Inman, employe of the Omaha and Council Bluffs street railway company since the strike trouble started April 20, fired six shots when pickets demolished and burned Inman's automobile. Inman was held at the police station.

In the melee two persons were injured and two non-striking workers were hurt as the car barn was stoned and a tram damaged by fire.

The strike was settled once after a six weeks' walkout which started April 20. Unin demands for higher wages and recognition, however, were left subject to future negotiations. A dispute over seniority revived the controversy several days ago.

New Youth Unit To Assume Job Of College Aid

Federal aid to needy students attending colleges here and in the States, inaugurated last year by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, will be continued in the 1935-36 academic year by the National Youth Administration.

To be eligible for assistance, students must be able to do high-grade college work, he declared. Successful applicants will receive part-time jobs which should enable them to average $15 a month while attending school. Scholarships and loans are not provided.

All institutions of higher learning, public or private, may participate in the program so long as they are non-profit making. Students should make application to the president of the school he wishes to attend.

Locally, the institutions which cooperated in the earlier FERA program included Georgetown, George Washington, Catholic, Maryland and Howard universities. Dr. Alderman said it is too early to estimate how many young men and women will take advantage of Federal aid next fall, either in Washington or elsewhere.

Each college or university has a quota of 12 per cent of enrollment as of October 15, 1934.

Women Lawyers Ask Amendment

Equal Rights Clause in Constitution Sought.

The National Woman's Party will bring the recent indorsement of the equal rights amendment by the National Association of Women Lawyers to the attention of the House and Senate Judiciary Committees, it was announced yesterday.

The proposed amendment reads as follows: "Men and women shall have equal rights throughout the United States and every place subject to its jurisdiction."

Miss Laura M. Berrion, Washington attorney, who was elected vice president of the women lawyers' group, said:

"I rejoice that the women lawyers have decided to take this present stand in the harder and more reaching campaign for an amendment to the national Constitution guaranteeing complete equality of rights between men and women."

The women lawyers also indorsed the equal rights treaty at the League of Nations.

Walter Wedell, Flying Brother Of Jimmi, Kille

Plane Plunges Into Gulf; Search Is Begun for Body.

By the Associated Press.

Gulfport, Miss., July 19.—Walter Wedell, flying brother of the late Jimmie Wedell, world record holder, lost his life today when his plane crashed into the Gulf of Mexico 15 miles off Gulfport and sank.

Wedell-Williams Air Service Corporation officials at New Orleans said that Howard L. Sanders, Anderson, S. C., had chartered the plane to go to Mobile, Ala., but Mobile airport attaches said that Wedell did not arrive there.

Coast Guard boats and seaplanes were rushed to the scene of the crash and located the wrecked plane, submerged in about 50 feet of water.

One mangled body was dragged from the crumpled ship, the lightkeeper at Chendeleur Island said, and the plane was being towed into shallow water.

Attaches of Chendeleur Island, four miles from the crash site, said the body recovered was that of a short man with black hair and a dark mustache. Wedell was tall, blond and clean shaven.

The ship was the Aristocrat, NC 492 K. It was identified by pieces of fabric found floating on the water where the ship fell.

Two Coast Guard ships sent to the scene from Gulfport and two seaplanes from Biloxi were used in the search for the plane and occupants, but when they arrived there was no sign of life and only floating debris.

Three men on Chendeleur Island reported seeing the crash. One of them said the plane, after showing signs of trouble, fell into the water in a tail spin.

The accident today closed the careers of the flying Wedell brothers. Jimmy Wedell was killed June 24, 1934, at the Wedell-Williams Patterson, La., Airport when a student flier "froze" on the stick.

Cotton Control Ruled Illegal By Texas Court

Bankhead Law Declared 'Pretext' to Curb Production.

By the Associated Press.

Sherman, Tex., July 19.—The controversial Bankhead cotton control act, born of the New Deal, was declared unconstitutional today by Federal Judge Randolph Bryant.

Granting an injunction against its enforcement, the judge said:

"I think the law is clearly and plainly unconstitutional."

His ruling came on a plea for injunction filed by D. C. Wallace, Gunter, Tex., ginner, who sued on behalf of himself and all other cotton ginners of Texas and the Texas Cotton Ginners Association.

"Owing to the unusual and extraordinary circumstances present in this case, I think that an injunction should issue upon the giving of proper security," Judge Bryant said.

"It is only a very thinly disguised attempt to regulate the production of cotton under the pretext of the exercise of the taxing power of the national Government. This power, if it exists at all, is not committed to the national Government under the terms of the Constitution of the United States, but is expressly reserved to the States."

The case was set for hearing September 11 on its merits.

Federal Judge Grants AAA Tax Injunction

Newark, N. J., July 19 (U.P.).—The AAA was ruled unconstitutional today by Federal Judge Guy L. Fake. He announced he would issue an injunction restraining the Government from collecting the AAA processing tax. Harlan Besson, United States attorney, said he would file an immediate appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals and would ask for a stay of the injunction.

The decision resulted from a suit filed by ten New Jersey manufacturing firms who attacked the processing tax as unconstitutional. They argued it was class legislation of a type prohibited by the Constitution as it levied a tax on one class of individuals, not for Government use, but for the benefit of a special class.

Trolley Loaded With Children Jumps Rails; 1 Killed, 52 Hurt

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 19.—One man was killed and 53 other persons, many of them women and children, were injured today when a crowded street car bound for the Seventy-fifth Street beach jumped the track and crashed into railway viaduct.

Fire which broke out immediately perilled the injured trapped within the crushed car, but firemen arriving from a nearby station extinguished the flames and hurried many of the passengers to a hospital.

Several passengers said the car was "swaying crazily" before it left the rails. Officials of the surface car company said a stone or piece of metal on the tracks caused the derailment, and started an investigation.

Witnesses said many of the children aboard the car, including half a dozen on the front platform, were hurled into the street.

The motorman, Robert Paul, whose father, Walter Paul, was killed in a street-car accident only a few rods from the scene of today's crash two years ago, was hurried to a police station for questioning.

Heroine of the crash, police said, was Miss Mary Sibbs, a nurse at Jackson Park Hospital.

Although she suffered fractures of her right arm and collar bone, Miss Sibbs gave first aid to several of the injured, and accompanied them to the hospital, where she was assisting in the emergency treatment when she collapsed.

Among the passengers most seriously injured was Michael Pinto, 14, whose leg was crushed. Surgeons said amputation would be necessary. Several other children were among those requiring hospital treatment.

Plane Modeling Champions See Local Exhibits

Ten Youths Are Guests at Reception Tendered by the N. A. A.

The ten model aircraft champions of the Nation, selected at the St. Louis meet last month, arrived in Washington by air early yesterday afternoon to attend a reception arranged in their honor by the National Aeronautic Association.

Four of them were flown from the Middle West in the Lockhead Vega which Amelia Earhart Putnam flew in the transcontinental derby in 1929. Six arrived by American Airlines. They were met at the Hoover Airport by representatives of the N. A. A. and various governmental aviation departments.

The boy champions are: Bruno Marchi, 19, of Boston; Leo Weiss, 16, of New York; John Stokes, 14, of Philadelphia; Torrey L. Capo, 18, of Boston; Carl Goldberg, 22, of Chicago; Vernon Boehle, 20, of Indianapolis; Kenneth Ernest, 19, of Indianapolis; Richard Korda, 20, of Cleveland; Louis Cassale, 21, of New York; and Bronik Soroka, 19, of Cleveland.

Immediately after their landing, they were taken to the Senate where they met Senator William McAdoo, president of the National Aeronautic Association. Later they visited the Department of Commerce where they were received by officials of the Bureau of Air Commerce.

After inspection of the aircraft exhibit at the Smithsonian Institute, they were entertained at the headquarters of the N. A. A. on Dupont Circle with a buffet dinner.

Today they will visit the Navy Department, War Department, the White House, Bolling Field and the Naval Air Station. A moonlight boat trip down the Potomac will conclude their program in Washington.

Gallinger Admits Fewer Patients

Fewer persons are getting into Gallinger Hospital as free patients because of checks made by the Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals.

This was disclosed yesterday in a report by Superintendent Edgar A. Bocock to the Board of Public Welfare showing that 1,253 patients were admitted in June as against 1,337 for May.

Elwood Street, welfare director, said this was the second consecutive month in which there had been a decline.

The daily average number of patients during June was 727, as against 757 in May.

The admitting bureau was established several months ago by the Community Chest. It handles requests for care by both public and private agencies. Its creation was sponsored by the health committee of the Council of Social Agencies and by officials of the Board of Public Welfare.

I. C. C. Refuses To Allow Cut In Freight Rate

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday denied an Eastern railroad request for reduced freight rates to meet truck and waterway competition.

The commission divided, 5 to 3, in refusing the application for relief under the long and short haul clause of the interstate commerce act, which forbids a higher rate for a long haul than the total of rates between intermediate points.

It was the second split within a week on the application of this provision.

The roads sought to reduce rates on merchandise in shipping containers and in mixed carloads and any other specific commodity rates which they considered necessary to meet truck and waterway competition.

Meanwhile, Joseph B. Eastman, co-ordinator of transportation, met the heads and representatives of the country's railroads to urge that they carry out his recommendations for unification and co-ordination of facilities to cut operating costs.

At a joint meeting of the regional co-ordinating committees of the railroads and directors of the Association of American Railroads he outlined his program for the coming year.

Soft-Coal Wage Parley Is Postponed Again

By the Associated Press.

Resumption of negotiations on new wage and hour contracts for the vast Appalachian soft-coal fields was postponed yesterday until July 25. The negotiations were to have started next Monday, but were postponed until Thursday because of congressional delay on the Guffey-Snyder coal bill to set up a little NRA for the bituminous industry. The bill is before a Ways and Means sub-committee.

The present agreement, extended three times already to give Congress time to act on the coal legislation, expires July 31.

Jail's Criticism At Alexandria Called Childish

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
307 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Rev. Pierce S. Ellis, chairman of the Alexandria Jail commissioners, who recently filed a report of alleged unsatisfactory conditions at the city jail, issued a statement yesterday in which he characterized comments made by members of the city council regarding the report of the commissioners as "childish gestures at being humorous, and puerile attempts to appear brilliant and informed on methods of prison work." He further stated that "little or nothing is known by those who made remarks about existing conditions at the jail."

The comments to which Ellis refers were made at a meeting last Tuesday night, when councilmen stated that they were unwilling to turn the city jail into a "summer resort," or an "air-conditioned hotel."

The report of the commissioners was referred to the city manager for a report and recommendations, which is the routine procedure in cases of this kind, and the Mayor made it plain that, while he considered some of the recommendations as unnecessary, any unsatisfactory conditions as to safety of the prisoners, and sanitation, would be taken care of.

Mayor Davison stated last night that the recommendations would be handled after the city manager makes his investigation. However, he said, there are many homes in Alexandria where the conditions are worse than at the jail, due to lack of proper sewers and other needed improvements, and he considers it more important to give prompt attention to these matters than to remodel or reconstruct the jail, which, after all, he says is a penal institution. There is no intention, he said of "dismissing the report," as intimated by Mr. Ellis, or to sidetrack it, but the council must proceed about these matters in an orderly manner. He also denied any attempt to appear "humorous," or "brilliant," but said he was only presenting facts.

A statement of the finances of the Alexandria public schools has been issued by T. C. Williams, superintendent, showing a balance on hand and anticipated receipts from the State of $71,061.11 and $23,000, respectively, for operation of the schools until December 31, 1935, the close of the city's fiscal year.

The total enrollment in all schools for the year was 5,227, there being 4,219 white and 1,008 colored pupils. The daily attendance was 4,953, or approximately 95 per cent. The per capita cost of instruction for the high schools was $37.17; elementary schools, $25,89, and for both high and elementary schools, $28.89. The total per capita cost of education, which includes instruction, repairs to buildings, and everything in connection with the schools except capitalization, was $40.31.

Mayor E. C. Davison, at the request of the department of education of the colored Elks, has appointed 10 representatives from the City of Alexandria to attend the National Education and Economic Congress, in Washington, August 22.

The delegates appointed are: The Rev. A. W. Adkins, Julia Pritchett, James T. Holmes, S. W. Madden, Alma Murray, the Rev. F. de Lisle Pike, Margaret Evans, Connie Chissell, Leon Baltimore, sr., and Wesley D. Elam.

Roland Samuels, 36, of High Point, N. C., is in the Alexandria Hospital in a serious condition as a result of stab wounds alleged to have been inflicted with a pair of scissors, in his arms and shoulders. A man giving the name of R. L. Moore, and his address as West Virginia, is being held by the police pending an investigation of the case.

A contract for the construction of sidewalks, curbs and gutters at the overhead bridge of the R., F. & P. Railroad has been awarded to Warren P. Brenizer & Co., of Washington, at a cost of $39,407.

A charter has been issued by the State corporation to the Yellow Cab Co., of Washington, to operate a fleet of taxicabs in Alexandria. The officers named are Claude E. Ryan, president; Fleet S. Hughlett, secretary-treasurer, and these officers, together with William J. Nolan, all of Washington, comprise the board of directors.

A certificate of accidental death has been issued by Dr. Llewellyn Powell, city coroner, in the case of Charles A. Quayle, 56, who died in the Alexandria Hospital following a skylarking bout with a friend in which Quayle was struck in the stomach by his companion, Monday night. He went to the hospital the following day and died of peritonitis Thursday morning.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

More than 40 residents of Garrett Park, Md., opposed a change in zoning to permit J. E. Hines of Kensington to maintain a setback of less than 25 feet for a new house he is building at Montrose avenue and Argyle street, Garrett Park, at a hearing yesterday before the Board of Zoning Appeals in the Bethesda County Building.

Hines had provided a 25-foot setback in his plans, according to Building Inspector Jack Gray but had built the house with less than this setback. When the building inspector ordered the house torn down and moved back, Hines appealed to the board for change in the zoning.

Irving C. Root, chief engineer for the Maryland Park and Planning Commission, testified that the change could be made without excessive cost by the builder.

State Senator Stedman Prescott appeared for the town council and citizens of Garrett Park and F. Barnard Welsh, Rockville attorney, for Hines.

The zoning appeal board visited the scene of the dispute last night but withheld a decision until later.

Fairfax County Aviation Field Sold Operators

Airport Once Considered for Zeppelin Base Bought by Mt. Vernon, Inc.

George Washington Airport in Fairfax County, Va., the largest flying field in point of area in Greater Washington, has been sold to Mount Vernon Airways, Inc., V. Ward Boswell, Alexandria real estate operator, who recently acquired the property embracing the airport, announced yesterday.

The Mount Vernon Airways, Inc., is the company which has been operating the field for the past three or four years. The new owners are planning to continue its use as an airport, thus saving for Washington its Zeppelin transatlantic terminus if, and when, such a line is inaugurated.

Boswell and officials of the Mount Vernon Airways yesterday did not divulge the price paid for the airport.

Fairfax County School Board Surveys Needs

Delegations Urge Grants From PWA for New Projects.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The school board of Fairfax County, Va., met yesterday to study the needs of school buildings in the county. Because of the rapidly increasing enrollments, the present school centers are greatly overcrowded.

The Federal Government, through the PWA, has offered to donate 45 per cent of the total cost of all school projects, including land, building and furnishing. It also offers to purchase the county bonds at a low rate of interest.

Several delegations representing citizens of the various communities appeared before the board yesterday, urging it to take advantage of the grants from the Federal Government, declaring that within the next few years it will be absolutely necessary to provide larger school buildings and if the county does not take advantage of the grant offered the citizens will be forced to bear the entire cost of school building. Most of the delegations urged the completion of the new Fairfax High School which was started last year. This school is without auditorium, adequate classroom space, and an agriculture and home economics building.

Following a survey of the immediate school building needs and a discussion of the projects with State Architect Raymond B. Long, the board decided that the following projects were needed and submitted them to the State school architect's office for estimates of the cost of construction:

Anandale School, two additional classrooms and furniture.

Centreville School, alterations to the old building to provide for an auditorium and furniture.

Chesterbrook School, two additional classrooms and two washrooms and furnishings.

Franconia School, two additional classrooms and furniture.

Groveton School, three additional classrooms and furniture.

Woodlawn, an eight-acre site, a building containing six classrooms and auditorium and all necessary furnishings.

Falls Church School, three additional classrooms and furniture.

Lincolnia, a new school building, containing six classrooms and auditorium, all furnishings and a school site containing about eight acres.

Gum Spring Colored School, three classrooms and furniture.

The school board will meet again Monday to consider plans for financing the 55 per cent of the cost of these projects.

Contracts were let for the furnishing of two new school buses. The Mason Manufacturing Co. of Newport News was awarded the contract for furnishing the bodies at a total cost of $900 and the Horn Motor Co. of Herndon was given the contract to furnish the chassis with necessary extensions to fit the new bodies at a total cost of $1,277.90.

The Vale Home Demonstration Club was granted the exclusive right to use the old Vale schoolhouse until needed by the county.

Another tonsil and adenoids clinic under the auspices of the Fairfax County Health Unit will be held at Lorton School, Sunday and Monday. A similar clinic held in the school around the first of the month gave operations to 26 children in Mount Vernon and Lee districts. The clinics are sponsored by local school and community leagues, assisted by the local and national chapters, American Red Cross. County, Alexandria and out-of-State physicians assist the health unit officials in the work. Equipment for the clinic is loaned by Capt. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of the District of Columbia penal institutions at Lorton.

Maj. John K. Shawvan, of Clyde, Ohio, will be the principal speaker, giving a history of the Battles of Manassas. His address will open the celebration and will be held in the Grove of the Henry House in the Battlefield Park, near Manassas, Va. Mrs. William W. Meyer will recite and a picnic luncheon and tour of the battlefield will follow.

Kearns Named Superintendent At Cheltenham

Former Pastor Appointed to Head House of Reformation.

Hal T. Kearns, former minister and penitentiary chaplain, will be the new superintendent of the House of Reformation at Cheltenham, Md., it was announced yesterday. He will succeed John B. Pyles, who is retiring.

Born in Salisbury, N. C., in 1888, he was educated in the public schools of that State. He was graduated from St. Lawrence University, New York, and Yale University.

He was a minister for 15 years before entering prison reform work. From 1927 to 1931 he was part-time chaplain of the Maryland Penitentiary. When the State Penal Farm was established at Hagerstown in 1931 Mr. Kearnes was named its first superintendent.

Thirty-seven pupils, between the ages of 4 and 12, were awarded certificates at graduation exercises of the Riverdale (Md.) Presbyterian Church summer school last night. The session closed yesterday afternoon with a picnic in Rock Creek Park.

Following presentation of songs and recitations by members of the various classes and an exhibit of hand work completed by pupils during the session, Rev. W. Keith Custis, pastor of the church and superintendent of the summer school, made the awards.

The classes were taught by Mrs. Robert Bonnar, Miss Louise Reinohl and Miss Janet Roby.

"The Japanese beetle menace is worse in Maryland this year than at any time during the past decade," according to Dr. E. N. Cory, head of the department of entomology at the University of Maryland. Dr. Cory said that this was the first time that the insects had caused any appreciable damage to foliage and crops.

"They are particularly bad," he said, "around the Elkton, Colgate, and Cambridge districts and in Worcester County." He said the marked increase may be due to the fact that the State insect control fund has been cut 40 per cent, necessitating a reduction in the number of beetle control agents.

Members of the Riverdale Heights Volunteer Fire Department have completed plans for their annual carnival to be held on the grounds of the Stephens Citizens Association on the Edmonston road, August 1, 2 and 3.

New York, July 19.—"The Virginia tradition" was outlined to New Yorkers today by Dr. Douglas S. Freeman, Pulitizer prize-winning historian and editor of the Richmond News-Leader.

"Virginia," Dr. Freeman said, "is a positive contradiction of the current view that being liberal means being liberal with other peoples' money."

Cpeaking at a luncheon given by the Virginia Press Association, here on a convention cruise, with nearly 200 local guests, including leaders in the publishing and advertising fields, Dr. Freeman asserted that the Virginia tradition "combines rigid constitutionalism, fiscal conservatism and political liberalism."

'Life' Is the Topic Of Lesson Sermon

Christian Science Golden Text Is From Psalms.

"Life" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ Scientist tomorrow. The golden text is from Psalms 36:7-9: "How excellent is thy loving kindness, O God! therefore the children of men put their trust under the shadow of thy wings . . . and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures. For with thee is the fountain of life."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "For, as the Father hath life in Himself; so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself." (John 5:26).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Text Book: "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Father, Eternal Life; the one Mind; the divine Principle, commonly called God." (Page 336.)

First Chinese Christian Church In D. C. to Be Formed Soon

The Rev. Ching-chong Hung has come to Washington with his family, Mrs. Hung and their 3-year-old son, Wie-ling, to be pastor of the Capital's first Chinese Christian Church.

Many Religious Groups Here Cooperate in Movement.

By Jimmie Shen.

In a few weeks' time there will appear somewhere around Washington's Chinatown a Chinese Christian church, the first one of its kind ever to be founded in the city to take care of the spiritual needs of Washington's 800 Chinese residents.

A 6-foot, broad, brown-faced Chinese pastor, the Rev. Ching-chong Hung, has come here from Detroit, Mich., to be pastor of the new Chinese Community Church of Washington.

The Rev. Hung carries with him a wealth of religious and educational background and experience. He was brought up in a Christian home, his grandfather being the dean of the Canton Theological Seminary in China.

After getting an M. A. degree from Columbia University, the Rev. Hung worked for six years in Detroit as associate pastor of the Central Methodist Episcopal Church in charge of its Chinese department. During that time he succeeded in building up a Chinese membership of the church from a meager 70 to about 300.

Always assisting him is Mrs. Hung, his charming and devoted wife, who incidentally carries with her a master's degree from the University of California. They are parents of a 3-year-old son, Wieling.

"I have just come from Detroit. So I don't know much as yet," the Rev. Hung said. "But we are all working and we expect to find a suitable location somewhere near Chinatown and to complete organization in two or three weeks' time."

The need for a Chinese community church in Washington has long been felt. But nothing definite was done about it until recently when Dr. Pak Chue Chen, a graduate of George Washington University Medical School, came back for a visit. He gathered around him some American and Chinese friends and talked things over.

Before long a movement was set afoot to form such a nondenominational church, active in educational, social, recreational and religious programs.

Last month the Chinese Community Church completed its incorporation under laws of the District of Columbia, with a board of managers of 36 members and a board of trustees of five with the Rev. Eddy L. Ford, of the Foundry M. E. Church, as chairman of the latter body.

Those on the board of managers, all representatives of the Chinese and American Christian organizations in Washington, include: Dr. C. C. Rasmussen, Mrs. Merle Cain, Dr. Rufus Weaver, Mrs. George C. Ross, Mr. C. J. Crouch, Mrs. John Coxhead, the Rev. J. R. Mills, Mrs. Fannie Foster, Col. William Tufts, Mrs. Miriam T. Parsons, Dr. William Darby, Mrs. William Darby, Mrs. W. R. Rhoades, Eliot Thompson, Miss H. P. Anderson, L. W. DeGast, the Rev. E. L. Ford, Mrs. Joy Morgan, Dr. J. S. Noffsinger, Dr. B. F. Meeks, Dr. Frank Hess, Mrs. Grace Holsopple, Goon Gwoo, Lee Chong, Joseph Chang, C. N. Lee, Lee Gim, William Sewall, Lee R. Wilson and the Rev. F. A. Parsons.

As members of the board of trustees are the Rev. Eddy L. Ford, chairman; Lee R. Wilson, treasurer; Mrs. Grace Holsopple, secretary; Dr. Frank Hess and Lee Chong. The Rev. C. C. Hung, pastor of the new church, is member ex officio of the board, which will function as the executive committee of the institution.

The first annual budget of the church calls for about $3,500, the major portion of which has already been raised or pledged by Americans and Chinese interested in seeing the church formed to serve as a community center for the Chinese colony in Washington.

Practically all the major Christian denominations and organizations here are cooperating in the new church, which, when completed, will seek affiliation with the Church of Christ in China.

Congregational Churches Join On New Plan

Vanderwerken, Virginia, Unites With Local Organization.

Hoping to strengthen the organization and promte the growth of their respective parishes, Mount Pleasant Congregational Church and Vanderwerken, Va., Congregational Church have worked out a plan of co-operative association.

The plan, officially approved by the Middle Atlantic Congregational conference, of which both churches are members, is the first attempt at activity co-operation between individual city and suburban churches in the Congregational denomination.

Frequent consultations between the ministers, members of the staff and officers will effect the co-operative plan. With the opening of the fall and winter activities in September the plan will be extended to all organizations in each church.

The plan originated in an exchange of letters between Dr. Clinchy and the Rev. Paul Hunter, of Vanderwerken church.

"It is the purpose of both churches to make the association a development of growth in friendship and fellowship that will increase our opportunities for Christian service," Mr. Hunter said in discussing the plan. "There are many possibilities for this future growth. The idea has the radicalism of common sense."

"The Middle Atlantic Conference feels that this is a great forward step in developing co-operative association and a strengthening of all churches which adopt the plan," Dr. Clinchy said. "Both Vanderwerken and Mount Pleasant Churches will benefit by the new relationship, and it is expected that a similar plan will be adopted by city and suburban Congregational Churches in all sections of the country."

Two Held in Attempt To Open Bakery Safe

Waynesboro, Va., July 19 (AP).—Two men who, Police Chief R. L. Switzer said, attempted to open a safe in a bakery here yesterday, were being held today pending arrival of a report on their fingerprints from the Department of Justice in Washington.

The pair, who gave the names of James Donovan, 28, Jacksonville, Fla., and James Henderson, 24, Hickman, Ky., were seized in a police trap early yesterday. Officers were tipped that a robbery was planned and surprised the men at work, Switzer said. Both men wore gloves and had modern burglar's tools, the official added.

Barbarity Unabashed.

A world unbecomingly calloused to the rigors of government by dictatorship still must gasp at the implications of the latest Nazi edict, this time directed at the Catholic Church of Germany. It is evident that spying and clubbing, which have long been the regular order in the politics and economics of communal Germany, now will be injected into the religious life of harassed minorities. Thus the picture of a ranking nation's degeneracy is complete.

It will be argued by Germany's paid propagandists that practical politics demanded such action, that no government could tolerate boring from within by religious groups. The answer is that politics loses all claim to practicality or anything else when it attempts to strangle freedom of conscience and when the state becomes dependent upon the denial of religious freedom for maintenance of its existence.

There are two reasons for suggesting that the edict was a natural climax of Nazi policy. One is the fanatical nature of the German chancellor himself, as suggested by the "double" he employs for public occasions, by the "blood purge" of last year, and by the iron-fisted execution of his every order. A man in such a predicament can only hope to continue in power by ruthlessly eliminating all opposition and even thoughts of opposition. The other reason lies in the nature of all dictatorships, and particularly of unenlightened dictatorships. Government by one man precludes discordant whispers from all others.

That the oppression of the church will be merciless, as the anti-Semitic movement has been, is indicated by the personality of the man chosen to direct the campaign. As Prussian minister of justice, Hans Kerrl was notorious for his harsh expulsion of all non-Aryan elements from his sphere and for his rulings condoning religious persecution, which were far more drastic than any federal law.

So the grim pageant plays on: first the Jews, next the Catholics and soon all minorities. It is impossible to believe that the policy can be followed to its ultimate conclusions in a nation as civilized as Germany without some final outburst of pent-up fury.

An Anti-Crime Alliance.

Development of J. Edgar Hoover's law-enforcement division of the Department of Justice is generally regarded as one of the most progressive achievements of the Federal Government in recent years. The ludicrous figure of the "revenooer" of other days has been supplanted by the eminently capable "G-Man," with the typical result that bank robberies have decreased 37 per cent since 1933.

Tight-lipped, indefatigable and courageous, the Federal officers now match Canada's far-famed Royal Northwest Mounted Police in putting fear into the hearts of lawbreakers and in impressing the futility of crime on the minds of a rising generation. Magazines, motion pictures and even comic strips have taken over the G-Men for heroes. Lately, badges to identify the wearers as "Junior G-Men" have appeared on toyshop counters. Following a long siege of lawbreaking, the country has taken fresh courage behind its new-found champions of law and order.

But the G-Man is a Federal officer and as such aims only at the relatively conspicuous criminal, whereas the heart of the problem lies in the over-long records of small and more or less localized crime. This fact is brought out by the American Bar Association meeting in Los Angeles. In organizing a nation-wide war on crime, the lawyers urge co-ordination of all law-enforcement agents, including educators, sociologists, prison officials, physicians, ministers as well as lawyers and police. Each city, county and State, it is pointed out, does its utmost to meet its own problems, but lack of leadership and integration of programs rob all measures of their full effectiveness. Washington, to a degree, has already recognized this point, with the result that plans are now being discussed to connect the District Police Department with those in nearby Virginia and Maryland.

Already the Department of Justice has taken leadership in this movement by setting up a police school and by working for a national police radio system. However, the co-ordination of detective and penal techniques and of programs of action will be far more easily accomplished than the hoped-for unification of local and State laws. The discrepancies between State banking laws, corporation laws, divorce laws—in all of which appears the desire to capitalize on laxity—suggest the difficulties confronting attempts to obtain anything approaching uniform codification of criminal law. But the six New England States, with their well-organized council, indicate that interstate co-operation is not entirely hopeless.

It is just such a combination that will go far toward eradicating the poisoning cancer of crime. And, incidentally, co-operative measures of this sort will counteract the demand for further concentration of power and initiative in the Federal Government—the dangers and disadvantages of which are coming daily to be more generally recognized.

The Forest Beyond The Trees.

No modern people accustomed to self-government would be likely to relinquish control over their public affairs if that issue should be squarely presented. Certainly there is no question as to what the attitude of the American people would be to any scheme candidly proposing to substitute dictatorial government for local autonomy. The unfortunate thing is that the transition from democracy to autocracy is seldom recognized as such until it is too late for effective protest.

For this reason former Gov. Ritchie's recent addresses are of more than usual significance. Mr. Ritchie's criticism is not aimed directly at the agricultural experiment, the TVA, the work-relief program, or the foreign trade policy of the Administration. His analyses purposely cut beneath these various recovery efforts and center in the larger issue of whether the American form of government is being undermined by expedient measures designed to bring about recovery. Far too little thought has been given the New Deal from this point of view.

The former governor's line of reasoning is the more convincing because it is devoid of partisanship. Indeed it re-emphasizes one of the fundamental principles on which the New Deal originally rested. Mr. Ritchie does not condemn the entire Roosevelt program. He merely insists that some aspects of that program have failed. "Further progress along mistaken lines always means danger or worse," he says, "and we should jettison policies which have proved to be unsound and un-American." This is only another way of advocating what the President used to be so fond of promising: That his Administration would be first to recognize its errors and to turn back at the first danger signal.

Actually, however, there is little disposition to follow such a policy. For example, the AAA threatens to destroy the export market for American agricultural products, while extending temporary benefits to farmers. Instead of curtailing its activities when these adverse results become apparent and the courts begin declaring different aspects of the measure unconstitutional, the Administration is pushing through Congress a more drastic bill, with new powers of regimentation to cover up the mistakes of the past.

A similar attitude has been taken toward TVA and the work-relief program. Instead of emergency powers being curbed with the passing of the economic crisis, new authority and more money are requested. It is time for the people to look beyond the immediate objective of these undertakings to the general trend of our national economy and our political institutions. That is what Mr. Ritchie has tried to do. He sees the approach of a "costly, bureaucratic, high-powered centralized government, which always grows by what it feeds on." In a still more outspoken address a few weeks ago before the Maryland State Bar Association he declared that "through the prodigious expenditure of prodigious sums of public money, and through the conditions the Government imposes upon the States before they can receive these funds, American self-government is being destroyed before our very eyes."

It is not necessary to accept Mr. Ritchie's aversion to any changes in the Constitution to recognize the wisdom of his principal thesis. If there are to be momentous changes in the American system of government, the issue should be fully and honestly presented to the people. The history of numerous countries shows that the continued accumulation of emergency powers affords the most direct route to dictatorship. To say that democracy has already been destroyed would be an unwarranted exaggeration. But to point out the trend in that direction, while remedies are still within the reach of the people, is a public service that too few statesmen are disposed to render.

Settle The Airport Question.

The time has come to quit shilly-shallying about Washington's airport. The House has already passed a bill setting up a commission to select a proper site. But the Senate has done nothing about the bill, Senator King having suggested that the District has other and more pressing problems to be considered and developments to be undertaken. As a result Washington is threatened with loss of all its air-transport service.

The situation has been made far more intolerable by the Interstate Commerce Commission's sudden threat to reduce the maximum passenger loads of planes entering or leaving the field unless something is done to remove the hazard of Military road cutting across it. Why the commission should have permitted operations for all these years and only recently should have become concerned about the road is not clear, but the fact remains that if such a decision is forthcoming the owners of the field say they will close down entirely. With Arlington County firm in its refusal to allow the road to be closed (it is submitted that 4,000 passenger cars and 1,000 trucks use it daily), a distressing impasse has been reached.

Washington must have an airport. To construct a new highway replacing Military road—at an estimated cost of $50,000—is not feasible at present since the commission may ultimately decide upon another location for the port, thus obviating the necessity for shifting the thoroughfare. Nothing remains but to demand immediate action toward creation of a permanent air terminal. As the House bill now stands it is far from desirable, in that it requires the District to pay the entire cost of the field. This is patently unfair. But it does not excuse complete inaction by the Senate. Every new impasse emphasizes the necessity of striking directly at the main objective—which is to secure a permanent airport for the District.

With millions of dollars in public works money lying fallow for lack of suitable projects, it is ridiculous that the Nation's Capital should be without safe and convenient airport facilities.

Give Business A Chance.

In 1934 President Roosevelt was planning to achieve a definitely balanced budget for the fiscal year 1936, with continued reduction of the national debt thereafter. In his budget message of last January, however, he asked instead for an appropriation of $4,000,000,000 for work relief, to be covered chiefly by borrowing. With characteristic optimism, he explained that "such deficit as occurs will be due solely to this cause (that is, unemployment relief) and it may be expected to decline as rapidly as private industry is able to re-employ those who are now without work." Yet less than a month after the beginning of the fiscal year 1935-1936 the President has called a conference to discuss a relief program for 1936-1937. In informed quarters, it is believed that at least $3,000,000,000 will be requested.

In view of the sad state of the national finances and the uncertainties of the immediate future, it seems decidedly premature for the Administration to proceed with its relief plans on the calm assumption that the business improvement which it has repeatedly promised will not materialize. Recovery unquestionably will be retarded by an announcement that there is to be no change in the spending policies that have brought about an alarming increase in the public debt, without providing any solution of the unemployment problem. A more promising policy would be to protect business against constant Government interference and to take energetic steps to cut public expenditures with a view of creating openings for workers in private enterprise.

If these essentials to a solidly based recovery were assured, there is good reason to think that the country would soon be able to dispense with its vast emergency relief organizations. Despite the existing deterrents to progress, the business outlook is in some respects surprisingly encouraging. The advance in livestock prices, for instance, has greatly increased the buying power of growers and farmers over a wide area. It is significant, too, that the latest weekly statistics of bank clearings for the entire country are substantially higher than a year ago, with especially pronounced increases in the Pacific Coast cities. The Federal Reserve Board index of June department store sales is also higher than for any month since 1931, while another striking indication of more active trade is afforded by the increased utilization of bank deposits. While the rate of turnover is still relatively low, the amount of money involved both in New York and in other cities was much larger this June than in May or in June, 1934.

All these evidences of an expanded buying demand suggest that a foundation has been laid for a general business improvement embracing producers' goods as well as the trades and industries supplying consumers' goods and services. Investment expansion, however, is being thwarted and discouraged by unsound fiscal policies on the ground that there is no alternative way of providing for the unemployed. By continuing to live beyond its means, the Government is actually helping to perpetuate the conditions that force millions of men to remain upon work-relief rolls.

Instead of laying plans, therefore, to disburse more billions after the $4,000,000,000 work-relief fund has been spent, the Administration might better be considering how to reduce Government outlays and thus encourage private employers to expand their activities. That is the logical and the sure way to bring about a revival of the heavy industries and transfer men from relief rolls to private employment.

"A tax on congressional oratory would balance the budget."—Exchange. Not if it were an ad-valorem tax.

Oh, Well!

From the Baltimore Sun.

The rumors of a great shake-up in the Washington police force may be important. It seems to be pretty generally agreed that the Capital needs better policing, but, unfortunately, a change in personnel in the department is no guarantee of better policing.

For the new men, like the old ones, will still face the danger of arresting a Congressman, or the friend of a Congressman, which is a risk that no policeman can contemplate without a shudder. There will remain, also, the danger that some Congressman whose home is a thousand miles away may undertake to rearrange the high command, as Representative Blanton undertook to do some months ago. Even if the rumored shake-up should go the length of shaking out Blanton, what would be gained? There would still be more than 500 members of Congress, any one of whom might duplicate Blanton's activities. Indeed—although it is a thought we dislike to entertain—the Texan might be succeeded by a man from Maryland.

There may be some bad men in the Washington police force, but the worst thing in that department is no man, but political influence. And there is not much chance of shaking that out.

Had Lincoln Read It?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In refence to Mr. Robert Henry's article in The Sunday Post of July 7, "Great Authors Often Get Unearned Praise," I would like to point out one that is universally credited to Lincoln, which was used by Tyndale 300 years before, and again by another writer at an in-between period.

I refer to a part of his Gettysburg address, and I do so with no thought to decimate the greatness of that gem.

In 1525, when William Tyndale published his Bible under great stress, but in which work he nevertheless persevered, driven by the feeling it should be accessible to all, he said in the foreword or preface (he had both) words to the effect—"this Word of God should be of the people, by the people and for the people."

Lincoln used the same in November, 1863.

Retirement Age.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

There is only one flaw in the excellent letter in yesterday's Post, signed H. R. G., on the subject of "Retirement of Government Clerks." He insists on inserting the stipulation "at 60" in his proposed plan for optional retirement after 30 years' service. Why? He himself says " . . . few clerks are ever willing to leave the service unless there is some dire reason for their doing so." I heartily concur in this statement. Under the present retirement law the majority of them protest vigorously against retirement even at the age of 74.

In view of the foregoing it is unthinkable that if we had an unqualified law for optional retirement after 30 years' service there would be any considerable number of retirements before the age of 60. Few, very few, employes would accumulate 30 years' service before the age of 50. Probably less than 1 per cent of them would wish to retire before reaching the age of 55. Most of them still have more than one person to support at that age. But the privilege of retiring at any time after 30 years' service, if unusual circumstances made it desirable, would be priceless.

Mr. Edson's Service.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir:

Along with many citizens I very much appreciated the editorial tribute in The Post this morning to the late John Joy Edson. Everything that you state about his character and public service is fully justified.

I have thought, however, that your readers might be interested to know of one conspicuous service not mentioned, namely, that Mr. Edson had been for over half a century one of the most active supporters of the Family Service Association (formerly Associated Charities). He served as treasurer for 50 years and was chairman for a long time of the summer outings committee. The providing of wholesome recreational facilities for the underprivileged children of Washington, both white and colored, was very close to his heart.

He took a deep personal interest in the success of the two camps—Camp Goodwill in Rock Creek Park for white boys and girls and mothers, and Camp Pleasant in Anacostia for colored boys and girls and mothers. He visited these camps personally last year and even in recent weeks has shown his deep interest in them. The fact that about a thousand children will enjoy these out-of-door recreation privileges this summer, together with their educational features, is due more to Mr. Edson than to any other single person.

I have felt that this, which was only one of the many examples of his constructive philanthropy, was worth calling to the attention of your readers.

President Of U. Of M.?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Widespread interest has been created here in Prince Georges County and over the State of Maryland, and certainly in the District of Columbia, over the prospect of having Senator France as a successor to the post of Dr. Pearson, removed, at the University of Maryland. One would have to have a close-up of a university that has gone through discord and dissension, such as has been the portion of the excellent U. of M., to realize the absolute need for a complete purging out of the old leaven. I do not mean particularly of persons, but conditions.

It is, therefore, no genuine service to seek to have one who has been for many years necessarily in the movement—often with credit—of the university made to bear the mantle of permanent president. Even given full background, Mr. Byrd would inevitably find himself "on the way out" almost as soon as he had been given his appointment. It makes me wonder, as one fully conversant with the situation here, whether those who are in vigorous advocacy of him, as reflected in certain quarters, are not seeking to have him warm the seat for someone else of their choosing.

Aside from speculation as to motives, the fact remains that Mr. Curly Byrd lacks the academic preparation, qualities of academic experience, to creditably represent the university in educational technique and scientific necessities. He is simply not the man for the place—but he is rightfully the acting president during the summer months. He should be and would be retained for his long and valuable services to U. of M. and his unique niche in its sports and the like.

It is for this reason of the importance for the post to be filled from the outside that if Dr. France is interested, or could be, I exclaim: What a godsend to U. of M.! So say all who know him, which means multitudes.

Anti-Vivisection.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Attention is called to bill S. 1737, introduced in the United States Senate February 7, 1935, to prohibit experiments upon living dogs in the District of Columbia, which bill was also introduced in the House of Representatives April 5, 1935, H. R. 7295.

It is hoped that this bill, when passed, will serve as an example for the rest of the country to follow.

Vivisection is the greatest cruelty existing in the civilized world today and humanitarians all over the country are becoming thoroughly aroused against its cruel practices. The general public knows so little about it is the reason it has been allowed to continue. The best argument against animal experimentation is that it has proved a complete failure to humanity.

Against Automobile Inspection

To The Editor of The Post—Sir:

In view of the resolutions adopted by the Advisory Board of the Keystone Automobile Club in opposition to the proposed compulsory mechanical inspection of automobiles in the District of Columbia, we were, of course, interested in the editorial in The Post, issue of July 16, expressing support for the compulsory inspection bill.

We believe that the statistical data contained in the editorial by no means afford a convincing argument in behalf of an inspection system which will cost Washingtonians nearly $200,000, with pyramiding assessments thereafter.

A study by the Keystone Automobile Club reveals that only 2.52 per cent of the 53,139 cars involved in accidents in the years 1928 to 1934 inclusive were mechanically defective, and in that same period, but 0.1 per cent of the total registration of cars here were found to have been defective vehicles involved in mishaps. In other words, it is proposed to put 180,000 motor vehicle owners to the trouble and expense of so-called mechanical inspection because one-tenth of 1 per cent of automobiles heretofore involved in accidents were found to have been defective in some particular.

The editorial cited certain Pennsylvania State statistics. May we call to your attention the fact that Pennsylvania's accidents have increased in the face of a compulsory inspection system which, together with the repairs ordered by the privately-owned service stations which have been designated as "official inspection stations," costs the motorists there approximately $10,000,000 annually.

One of the most progressive of all States from the traffic standpoint is New Jersey, where no stone has been left unturned by Harold G. Hoffman, former State Motor Vehicle Commissioner and now Governor, to improve the State's safety record. After an intensive study of the results of compulsory inspection laws, New Jersey has refused to adopt such legislation.

On the face of it, compulsory inspection would appear to be an obvious solution to the accident problem. But close study of its operation proves otherwise and indicates clearly that it is a wholly unjustified burden upon the overwhelming proportion of motorists.

In opposing the measure now before Congress which, if passed, would saddle this new and wholly unjustified burden upon Washington tax payers, the Keystone Automobile Club has called attention to the fact that a joint committee of the American Standards Association and the American Society of Automotive Engineers now is engaged in an exhaustive study of suitable standards for the inspection of motor vehicles. Among the many distinguished authorities on this committee is Dr. H. C. Dickinson, chief of the division of heat and power of the National Bureau of Standards.

It is the contention of the Keystone Automobile Club that action on the compulsory inspection measure prior to the submission of a final report by this competent committee would be obviously unsound.

Animal Kingdom

"WHY oh why do you spoil your manly beauty by sticking out your tongue?" I asked the stone lion who sits in all his stony splendor on the east gate of the British Embassy.

"Because I jolly well feel like it," he replied in a strong English accent. "It's a beastly job keeping one's end up here in Washington. Do you think any of the S. A. B. O. W. enjoy it?"

"The S. A. B. O. W.?" I asked.

"Obviously, the Sculptured Animal Brotherhood of Washington," he said snootily. "Your manner implies your utter ignorance that such a society exists. Just another example of crass American stupidity. The S. A. B. O. W. is holding a meeting at midnight tonight down in Rock Creek Park near the Taft Bridge. If you should attend the meeting it is possible you might learn something, though scarcely probable." And he lapsed into a stony silence, ignoring my fervent assurances that I most certainly would be there.

• • • •

A stranger meeting I never saw. In the brilliant moonlight was assembling a zoo of stone and bronze. As I watched I recognized the shaggy buffaloes from the Q street bridge; the sullen tigers from Sixteenth street, and the four unhappy lions from the Taft Bridge (the two that roar their protest and the two that suffer silently as if smelling something very, very, unpleasant.)

Perched on the trees were flocks of eagles from pylons and buildings all over the city. Even the wooden eagle who usually sits in solitary glory atop the zoo shop was there, talking with quite un-wooden animation to some griffins and seagulls surrounding him.

Wandering about underneath the trees were two British unicorns, gazing disdainfully down the bridge of their aristocratic noses. And sitting on a huge stump, which formed a sort of throne, were my friend the British lion and his twin brother.

Suddenly a metallic clanking was heard. And galloping down the road came a cavalcade of bronze horses minus the various dignitaries who usually adorn them as they stand guard in Washington's circles and parks.

• • • •

When they had halted with military precision, my friend the British lion rose and said with dignity:

"As king of the S. A. B. O. W., I pronounce this meeting open. We will now hear the grievance reports."

At this, the hot-tempered stone eagle, who normally sits on The Post building, burst forth into a speech, which showed a certain forcefulness undoubtedly absorbed from the reporters. Carefully pruned, it went something like this:

"Why blast my peepers, it's those blankety-blank blue eagles who make me sicker'n a buzzard. In the first place they're "agin" the chiselers. And anyone in this gathering who's got an ounce of stone in him knows what that means! No chiselers—no stone animals! But look at the publicity those birds get—their pictures in every store window, that is, until lately. Why it burns my pinfeathers to see an eagle in a pose like that—sort of a Russian dance step you know, where you kneel down and kick out your heels. And here most of us sit so sedately year in and year out. And do we get any publicity? We do not. By Jove, I'm going to try that dance step myself. It might get me somewhere." And raising his wings, he sat on his left foot and kicked out his right in true blue-eagle style.

"It is, without a doubt, this lack of publicity that is one of our greatest grievances," said one of the scholarly, silently-suffering lions from the Taft bridge. "I find it particularly galling to contemplate the extensive publicity given to the live animals in the Park Zoo. Scarcely a day goes by without some detailed story of the dragon-lizard's diet or the purple passions of the polar bear simply smeared over the front page of the paper. Situated as I am, almost overlooking the zoo area, I can discover no slightest glamour within its precincts. Particularly when the wind is just right. My sinuses have been badly affected."

"So that's why you always look so pained!" scornfully exclaimed one of the shaggy buffaloes from Q street. "After all, you can take it lying down but we on Q street have to stand year after year and preserve some sort of dignity with it all. Pretty difficult to keep a stiff tail sometimes. Ever since that fraternity man sawed mine off for his initiation I've been downright miserable. Oh, plastic surgery did wonders for me but I still get terrible tail-pains."

"Ah," said the British lion, "We all have our difficulties. This very morning I had to cope with a stupid pedestrian who asked me, fancy, why I stick out my tongue! It's a feeble enough gesture, heaven knows, but it does help one to muddle through this business of being a sculptured animal."

He made an effort to restore a semblance of British calm, and turned to the bronze horses whose posture was most peculiar. They were standing on their forelegs and waving their hind legs in the air and they explained that it was to restore their equilibrium, since so many of them had to prance all day long.

"What are your grievances?" asked the British lion.

"Starlings!" they chorused eloquently. And Gen. Sheridan's horse said vehemently:

"I speak with feeling when I say it's a well-known fact that the hats of our generals are practically irresistable to starlings. Greater than problems of posture or publicity is the starling problem."

In Or Out?

THINGS are moving so fast around here, so fast and so confusingly, that it will perhaps never be known whether Governor Talmadge was in the Roosevelt camp for a few hours or not, or whether if he was in it who was responsible for his getting out. The only thing that seems definite is that he is out or that he will be out upon the first occasion or the slightest pretext because he just won't stay put.

It's too bad more accurate information can't be obtain d because when the historians get around to their stuff the Governor will certainly figure in it. However, it is a funny story.

The Governor appeared at the White House on a late afternoon a couple of days ago with his sponsor, Clark Howell, publisher of the Atlanta Constitution. After his departure the story was that he had been taken into camp, that Mr. Roosevelt had said why, of course he wanted the State of Georgia to administer a $19,000,000 Federal highway allotment. With this premise established, the story went on, the President said in his best manner that the Governor and Federal Roads Commissioner McDonald could certainly get together on the details. With his most engaging smile, the story related, the President even picked up the telephone and made an appointment with McDonald for the Governor.

The authorized description of the meeting between the Governor and the President said at no time did Mr. Roosevelt indicate he knew the Governor had ever criticized him or called him a Bolshevik. It was just good, plain harmony. The impression is the President said, "Hello, Gene."

But now, in the light of later events, they say in Administration quarters that the stuff about taking the Governor into camp was pure bunk, that Clark Howell had been working on Mr. Roosevelt for several weeks to see the Governor and he finally did it just to accommodate an old party wheelhorse and personal friend. Many conferences had been held on the subject of taking Talmadge into camp, they insist, and every time the vote was a decided "No." According to these fellows, the Governor would not have been admitted had he come around with hat in hand.

The later events which changed the picture and made it so confusing happened in the Georgia delegation on Capitol Hill. It seems that if the Governor is taken in, some of those gentlemen are left out on a limb. Their political stock in trade has been to support the President against Talmadge. If peace is made with them, they've got nothing left to sell.

There's particularly the case of Senator Dick Russell, who comes up for re-election next year and Talmadge is expected to run against him. Well, Dick went along for some months trying to play both sides of the fence, that is, he was with Mr. Roosevelt on some matters and against him on others. His friends told him: "Dick, Talmadge has got that 'against the President' side of the street sewed up. You are going to have hard enough time as it is but certainly your best chance is to go down the line with the President." And Dick decided to do that.

Then out comes the story that the President and Talmadge have made up. That certainly leaves Dick in a pretty fix.

• • • •

At any rate stories promptly came from within the Georgia delegation that it was utterly impossible to take Talmadge into camp, that he was irresponsible. Why, they said, a few minutes after he left the White House he was calling the President a radical. You say to them, "Well, isn't he?" and their attitude seems to be that it's impossible for him and Talmadge to be in the same camp if the Governor calls him one.

It is not known whether the Governor was really calling the President names a few minutes after he left the warmth of his smile or not. If he was then it is the first time Mr. Roosevelt's personality has fallen down. It ought to hold at least until the victim gets out of town.

Maybe that's the reason the President's friends decided to get him from under and to say, why, Talmadge couldn't come in if he were to come begging.

France In Dilemma

All Plans To Maintain Status Quo Of Versailles Treaty Confused By Austrian Welcome Of Hapsburgs, British Cordiality Toward Germany And Mussolini's Campaign In Africa.

By Andre Vulliet.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris (By Mail).

STANDING pat on what is left of the European status quo as decided at Versailles, France is finding it more and more difficult every day to choose a policy most likely to insure European peace and give her security.

Haunted by the German peril, the French government has hesitated for 15 years between leniency and intolerance, without ever enlisting the full, unreserved support of the French people. Poincare was no more followed in his Ruhr expedition by the majority of his country's public opinion than was Briand in his generous schemes for the organization of a peaceful Europe.

In post-war Europe, France's interest was to defend the existing order. An awkward position indeed, with nothing to gain and much to lose! On the contrary, as a plaintiff who had little to lose and everything to gain, Germany's stand was much simpler. Her one and only aim was to break the fetters that had been imposed upon her by the Versailles treaty. In a way, her action could not be but dynamic (constructive or destructive, as you prefer), while, by the force of circumstances, France's was negative, tending to "prevent" the evolution of a natural phenomenon.

Like capitalism throughout the world, France had to meet a rising tide of claims. To use an American comparison, she did no better than the Republican party which, to stem the growth of radicalism, does not seem to know whether it must stick to its old guns or go progressive.

IT APPEARS that, since the end of the World War, the French people never knew for sure what they wanted, except that they wished to rest in peace with what they had for years to come. But how they would achieve that was never a matter of unanimous consent among themselves. It still is not.

They maneuvered in different directions through the uncertainties of post-war friendships, each time hoping they could look for clear sailing ahead. But in this weathercock old world it seems no diplomatic position can be built of bricks. The wind turns quickly and advantages are blown off almost overnight. This makes it extremely difficult not only to play but also to follow the intricacies of the European chess game.

In recent months, it has been France's aim to consolidate the central European status quo by working for a rapprochement between Italy, her new friend, and Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia, her old allies. Should the question of the Hapsburg restoration in Austria come to the fore again with renewed vigor, France's position might become quite delicate as she might again have to make an embarassing choice between two policies.

• • • •

FOR years, Great Britain, France and Italy minced no words to declare that the question of Austria's independence as opposed to the Anschluss (Germany's domination in Austria) was a vital one for the European peace.

There is a growing impression in Italy that the working up of a monarchical feeling in Austria is a formidable bulwark against a possible Nazi pustch in that country. Being particularly eager to prevent the German influence from expanding into Austria, the Italian government sees no objection to a Hapsburg restoration.

There are many in France who hold the same view. Discussing the question in Le Figaro, Wladimir d'Ormesson, one of the keenest observers, recently wrote: "It is possible that the Hapsburgs will save Austria's independence. Let us be frank. It is almost certain."

It seems that France should be for the Hapsburg. Yet, the French official view on the matter, as expressed by Foreign Minister Laval last March, is that "on the Hapsburg question, France will see eye to eye with her Little Entente allies."

The Little Entente states are deadly opposed to the Hapsburg family. Such categorical attitude may be explained if one realizes that Czechslovakia, Roumania and Yugoslavia were created or considerably enlarged by the dislocation of the Austro-Hungarian empire. But there never was such thing as an Austro-Hungarian nation or patriotism. What existed before the war was an Austro-Hungarian dynasty which held all the pieces together. That dynasty was the Hapsburg family.

That those who suffered from its domination and benefited from its dismemberment should hate to see the same dynasty come back into power, is but a natural development. This may explain the somewhat exaggerated view expressed time and again by spokesmen of the Little Entente states to the effect that "the Hapsburg restoration means war . . . that they would rather have the Anschluss."

• • • •

ANOTHER complication also arises from the projected Danubian pact, sponsored by France, by which Soviet Russia, Poland, Germany, France, Italy and the Central European states would pledge themselves to respect Austria's independence and not to interfere with her home affairs.

It now appears that the Little Entente is unwilling to sign such a Danubian pact unless a provision is added by which Austria would explicitly pledge herself never to call back the Hapsburgs. In a treaty for non-interference, this really sounds like interference. Besides, it would be equivalent to asking Austria to sign again what was imposed upon her by the St. Germain treaty. Sixteen years after the war she feels no more like submitting. This again may put the French government face to face with a delicate problem.

THE tentative Four-Power pact, proposed by Signor Mussolini in June, 1933, although never ratified, created enough stir in Central and Oriental Europe to cause France to modify her policy. It undoubtedly had a bearing on her rapprochemnet with Soviet Russia.

This pact, which was meant to give Great Britain, Germany, France and Italy a sort of supervisory capacity over European affairs, was immediately looked down upon with diffidence by the smaller European nations. It sent Poland hurrying for safety into Hitler's arms and gave the shivers to Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia which began to work closer to vast Soviet Russia than they had ever done before.

Partly to make up for Poland's estrangement, partly to work in harmony with the three Little Entente countries, the French government in turn began to look eastward for possible friends in Moscow and the sprawling Russian plains. Hailed in France by many people who would have turned it down a few years ago, the Franco-Soviet agreement of last May was received with but mild enthusiasm by the British who do not like the Soviets.

• • • •

THIS was a slight cause of disagreement between the French and the British, to which is now being added the Italo-Abyssinian conflict regarding which the French again are at a crossroad. They must either:

1. Wash their hands of the whole affair, a stand which in the long run will please neither the British nor the Italians;

2. Stand by the British in upholding Ethiopia's rights at Geneva, which would surely alienate Italy's friendship and might cause her to withdraw from the League of Nations. This would be a terrible blow to the Geneva institution;

3. Stand by the Italians, at the risk of seeing the British government fall into Germany's arms or withdraw from the Continent and pursue an isolationist policy.

All this is too much for an average Frenchman to grasp. It is much the same in every country in Europe. Their foreign policy is directed by a small group of people, while the masses are expected to follow. But no man in the street really understands what took place behind the scenes when Germany successively changed her attitude toward Soviet Russia, Poland, Italy; when Italy stopped to act hand in glove with Germany and be friendly to England and rapidly developed a warm feeling toward France; when the Soviets ceased to scorn the capitalist nations to join the European concert; when Great Britain herself so many times gave the impression of being close to France, or Germany or Italy, only to show the next moment that she was further away than ever.

By Morgan Baker.

(This is the fourteenth in a series of articles on foreign civil service and the fourth on France.)

HIGH standards of pre-entrance training for the scientific, professional and technical grades of the French public service are maintained through close correlation of the state system of education with requirements of public employment. Admission to those three general grades is based upon long and thorough courses in the various French universities which are among the best in the world.

BAKER.

As reported by the commission of inquiry on public service personnel, the sort of pre-entrance training afforded by a university law faculty, which is the route taken by a majority of the young men contemplating life careers in public administration, includes thorough grounding in the history and principles of French law. This is usually both administrative and constitutional and in some cases civil and criminal as well, with extensive work in general economics and one or more of the following subjects:

Comparative government, public finance, industrial or colonial legislation, international law and statistical method.

While the inclusion of training in economics serves to counteract an otherwise narrow concentration upon law, little or no attention is given to the study of political behavior or to the technical aspects of administrative organization, personnel policy or functional operations. The French approach to government and politics is mainly legal and philosophical.

At the Ecole Libre des Scienees Politiques, which serves primarily as an advanced training school for the foreign and fiscal services, a considerably wider range of instruction is offered. Here is great variety of courses, conducted chiefly by the lecture method, is classified in the following overlapping groups:

1. Diplomatic—International law, foreign policy, geography and colonial policy.

2. Administrative—Organization, functions and finance.

3. Economic-financial—Finance, money and commercial policy.

4. Economic-social—Statistics, economic organization and social theory.

5. General—Public law, history.

Outstanding among the technical institutions is the Ecole Polytechnique, rated as one of the finest State engineering schools in the world. The cream of its graduates normally receive appointments in the ministry of public works and are distributed to the following divisions: Highway and bridge, hydroelectric service, bureau of mines and similar service, or in the state telegraph and telephone administration.

The remainder of the Ecole Polytechniques graduates constitute a reserve for the military, naval and aeronautical establishments. Those who fail to pass the severe tests for diplomas are available for technical jobs with other Government departments or for positions in private industry.

Going on to the larger middle group of executive-clerical positions, including notably the chief clerks (redacteurs), it is found that the complete lycee (junior college) course, culminating in the baccalaureate degree, is required of candidates. Preferential treatment, of course, is accorded those possessing higher degrees.

In this group, as in the administrative and professional levels, the average academic attainment actually reached by applicants is much higher than the minimum prerequisite established by official regulations.

Between the grades outlined in the foregoing and the mass of clerical and manipulative employes, the line of demarcation is sharply drawn. Above the line the recruitment is reserved largely for an educational elite, although it is possible for the rank and file to advance by hurdling certain examination barriers.

Veterans' preference is predominant in the clerical and manipulative classes, it being estimated that at least two-thirds of the positions are held by veterans and their dependents with little weight given to formal education.

Recruitment and other phases of French public service will be discussed tomorrow in the final article in the series on foreign civil service.

Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, Civil Service Commissioner, left yesterday for an inspection trip of Civil Service district offices at Chicago, Denver, San Francisco, Seattle, St. Paul and New York. Mrs. McMillin will speak at various points of the trip on the commission's work and the Federal service.

Samuel's Children.

There is an old gentleman
Who lives in a stew—
He has so many children,
He doesn't know what to do!
He called swarms to Washington
And gave them fine jobs;
And myriads he is training
As soldiers or gobs.
He put youths in the forests,
To care for our trees;
While their brothers, at home,
Raise clover and bees.
He will educate the youngsters
Whose urge is to learn:
The forgotten boy and girl
Will soon have their turn.
It's no wonder that poor Samuel
Looks careworn and gaunt!
To support a crowd like his
Is a task few would want.

Passage Believed Certain.

Passage of the leave bills is more urgently desired than anything else in the way of legislation, so far as the great majority of Government employes is concerned. In view of this, E. Claude Babcock, president, American Federation of Government Employes, last night issued the following statement:

"The action of the House Rules Committee in granting a special rule which will make possible quick action on these measures is most welcome and most appreciated. I am confident that both bills will pass the House, for they constitute a matter of simple justice to Government workers and mean no additional expense of any consequence to the Goverment.

"We are most axious to have both bills enacted during the present session of Congress in order that Government workers, long deprived of adequate vacations, may have the opportunity to obtain the rest and recreation they need and, in the case of those whose homes and families are distant from Washington, the time to enjoy a visit home."

Miss Bertha Smith (P), Audit Division, General Accounting Office, has just returned from a six weeks trip to England and Scotland, following her graduation in June from the George Washington University Law School. Miss Smith was accompanied by her mother from Reading, Pa. She passed the District bar examination in May.

ONE of the 68 foreign countries contributing fingerprints to the Identification Division, Federal Bureau of Investigation, is Nyasaland, a little known protectorate in Central Africa. It is located on the southern and western shores of Lake Nyasa, the territory of which extends as far as the Zambesi River.

During June, 1,241 fingerprints were received from foreign countries. The bureau's fingerprint collection through the co-operation of 8,479 contributing agencies now contains more than 5,000,000 fingerprint records.

Promotion and Appointment.

Wallace L'Hommedieu (C), Office of Chief of Engineers, War, has been promoted from messenger to clerk. He assumed his new duties upon returning from a vacation at Atlantic City. The vacancy made by L'Hommedieu's promotion has been filled by the appointment of Max Kessler, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Postoffice Outing.

Several hundred employes of the Postoffice Department will enjoy their annual outing this afternoon under active direction of Clinton B. Eilenberger (F), Third Assistant Postmaster General, and Roy North, Deputy Third Assistant Postmaster General.

Leaving at 2 p. m. on a specially chartered boat for Marshall Hall, employes of the following divisions will take part: Stamps, Registry, Postal Savings, Finance, Money Orders, Parcel Post, Classification and the Philatelic Agency.

U.S. Is Watchful As Nazis Push War on Priests

said he found Harbeck well, which was taken to mean he had not been subjected to any physical violence, and that the German authorities had assured the Consul-General that within a few days the American would be deported to Switzerland. Apparently Jenkins won Harbeck's freedom on condition that the American be deported, a punishment far less severe, it is held here, than being jailed in Germany.

The attitude of the State Department, it may be said, toward the German religious drives, is the same as that held toward the alleged Mexican persecution of religious groups. Such action is regretted deeply and is regarded as disturbing pleasant international relations. Yet since each country must be conceded the right to handle its own domestic affairs, it is no concern of this Government unless American citizens become involved.

President Roosevelt earlier in the week was petitioned by more than one-half of the House either to have the Mexican situation investigated, or to make a statement indicating this Government's disapproval of religious persecution. The President authorized a cautious statement to be made on his behalf that he was symapthetic and the Government was sympathetic with all who deplore religious intoleration in any nation.

None Defends Hitler.

Several of those on Capitol Hill, asked for comment on the German situation, declined to make any statement, but none defended Hitler's actions. Others made cautious statements expressing their disapproval. Several influential members of the Senate, like Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, outrightly assailed Hitler's new religious drive.

Senator Walsh said:

"The action of the German government is regrettable. From time to time religious persecution on the part of governments which have an anti-religious philosophy are bound to occur. However, anti-religious activities under modern conditions can not long endure among civilized people. That a great nation like Germany, whose people possess so many admirable qualities and whose recent history has been one of religious tolerance, should join the spreading movement throughout the world against freedom of religion, is tragic. I have such high regard for and faith in the German people, and faith in their love of freedom, to believe that recent decrees which virtually put under government scrutiny all religious activities, will not long be tolerated."

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, while making no comment for quotation, indicated he stood on the German question precisely as he did on the question of alleged Mexican religious persecution. His resolution for an investigation of alleged persecution of Americans in Mexico is still pending.

Tydings Demands Tolerance.

Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, said:

"Most people delude themselves with the belief that when some religion to which they do not belong is under attack that their own religion is safe, and, hence, they need not concern themselves.

"However, history shows that where one religion is under attack, the attack quickly spreads to others at first thought to be safe.

"Therefore, within its proper scope and sphere, every effort should be made which would permit men to worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience.

"For again history shows that unchecked religious intolerance has caused more bloody wars than has any other one thing.

"The man who looks with complacency upon an attack on some other fellow's religion today, too often awakes to find his own under attack the following day."

Other Comment Included:

Senator James Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois. "I deplore the fact that any government should make the religion of any person the basis of an attack. But particularly, as all South Germany was built up in its art and educational systems by those who represented the Roman Catholic elements of Germany, an attack upon them it seems to me is an assault upon the most influential element all South Germany possessed.

"I hope the reports we have are not an accurate description of what the German officials are doing."

McCarran Gives Views.

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada: "The greatest element in any government that looks to success in the future is the freedom to regard and worship God as the individual will, along such lines as brings consolation to him.

"Whenever any government or organization sets itself up to either destroy or direct the trend of the human mind in religious matters, such government or organization is, I say most emphatically, excavating its own grave. The history of the world will bear this out.

"History regards the fact that whenever any government or group attempts to persecute or suppress those who wish to use their own free will in matters of religion, they make martyrs out of the oppressed, and bring the sympathies of humanity to them."

Representative William P. Connery, jr. (Democrat), of Massachusetts: "I stand with the President in his statement regarding freedom of worship in Mexico. Persecution of Catholics, Jews and other sects is an old story. The one who leads them passes on and the world goes on. Anybody who tries to abolish two or three religions has his hands full."

Representative Sam D. McReynolds (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee: "I am sorry to see any government take such action."

Churchmen Are Reticent.

Few of the Capital's outstanding Catholic churchmen were available yesterday for comment. Those who were available declined an expression of opinion.

Bishop James H. Ryan, rector of Catholic University, is out of the city and so is Mgr. John A. Ryan, prominent scholar and economist on the college staff. President A. A. O'Leary of Georgetown University could not be reached but it is improbable he would comment, said his secretary.

The Rt. Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of the archdiocese, likewise was unavailable. The Rev. Louis Vaeth, pastor of Our Lady of Victory Church and archdiocesan director of the propagation of the faith, was in Baltimore.

The Rev. Dr. John Cartwright, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, was the only Catholic clergyman approached who would volunteer a statement on the turn of events in the Reich. He branded the anti-church drive as "idiotic."

never shall be subdued," was the rallying cry of the patriotic society.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, July 19.—Japan's ambassador to Italy, Yotaro Sugimura, said tonight his country's interest in Ethiopia was economic, not political.

Tokyo's attitude has not changed since the inception of the Italo-Ethiopian controversy, he asserted, and Foreign Minister Koki Hirota's reaffirmation, at Tokyo, of that policy, was occasioned by the failure of newspaper dispatches sent to Tokyo to discriminate between political and economic interests.

Japan's economic interests in Ethiopia are very extensive, he said, so much so that she contemplates the establishment of a legation at Addis Ababa.

On the other hand, her political interests in Haile Selassie's kingdom are less than those of any other major power, he added—less than France's or Britain's because Japan did not sign the 1906 treaty guaranteeing Ethiopia's independence; less than those of members of the League of Nations because Japan no longer belongs to the league; less even than Washington's because America fathered the Kellogg antiwar pact.

Sugimura said all Japan asked in Ethiopia was "fair play" economically and an opportunity to carry on her commercial activity on equal terms with any other nation.

Mussolini Increases Force in East Africa

By the United Press.

Rome, July 19.—Premier Benito Mussolini sent new military units to East Africa today while his official press ridiculed Emperor Haile Selassie's exhortation to his Ethiopian subjects.

The steamer Gange sailed from Naples with 1,500 army truck drivers, mechanics, one battalion of the Gavinana division of the regular army, a detachment from the Fifth Engineers Regiment and 285 skilled workmen.

Giornale D'Italia jeered the Conquering Lion of Judah's cry: "Better to die a free people than live as slaves."

It quoted the British Antislavery and Protection Society's communication to the League of Nations saying one-fifth of Ethiopia's population are slaves.

Mussolini's Popolo D'Italia, of Milan, denied Italy spent 40 years preparing for war on Ethiopia. But it left no doubt that Il Duce is preparing for war now.

"Ethiopia," the newspaper said, "will be broken by Italian pick axes and, if necessary, by Italian cannon."

cer and former vice admiral, has been in disagreemeent with radical Nazis for at least a year. He clashed repeatedly with Goebels regarding religious matters.

Progress in Goering's move to bring the Roman Catholic church into line awaits Sunday sermons by priests, who are faced with official decrees that clergymen offending Nazi policy will be persecuted.

Steel Helmet Veterans Are Disbanded by Nazis

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 19.—Secret police today dissolved the Steel Helmet veterans' organization throughout Thuringia and the greater part of Silesia, taking many leaders of the Silesian veterans to the concentration camp at Bad Sulza.

It was also asserted the members spread rumors calculated to bring state authorities into public disrepute.

The dissolution order applied to the counties of Breslau, Liegnitz and Appeln. Property of Steel Helmeters in those sections was confiscated.

The Steel Helmet leaders seized in Thuringia and hustled off to the state concentration camp were taken into protective custody, it was explained.

A triple order was issued to state police forbidding:

1. The wearing of any steel helmet emblem or uniform.
2. All gatherings, even concerts, of the organization.
3. Display of any steel helmet flag or symbol.

Fashions Feature Party Given by Mrs. Prichett

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Capital society minds not at all the warm weather, for afternoon as well as evening parties are being given in cool gardens, with many iced drinks, both of the soft and other variety. On Thursday afternoon Mrs. Campbell Prichett entertained at one of the most delightful afternoon parties of the summer in the garden of her home on Kalorama road. Mrs. Prichett and her niece, Miss Natalie Keeney, with Mrs. Prichett's young son, Wilson, have recently moved from their apartment in the Cordova to the home of Mrs. Sidney A. Cloman, aunt of Mrs. Prichett, on Kalorama road. Yesterday's cocktail party was the first large entertainment given there this summer.

The house has been occupied for the past two seasons by the former Solicitor General and Mrs. J. Crawford Biggs, and early this month, shortly after Mrs. Cloman's departure for California, her niece moved back to the handsome residence for the summer months.

The garden is completely hidden from the street by a tall, latticed fence covered with vines, and at one end, under a gay marquee, there are comfortable garden chairs and convenient tables where many of the guests gathered yesterday. At the other end a long buffet table was spread with a cloth of pale yellow damask, and ornamented with a wide bowl of summer flowers. At either end were silver punch bowls and plates of delicious sandwiches, hot biscuits, and even a huge dish of strawberry jam. In another large bowl, filled with ice, were bottles of cold beer and long, slender bottles of pale gold Rhine wine for those who found the punch too heating.

Hostess Wears Pink.

Mrs. Prichett, gay and gracious, wore an afternoon frock of palest pink mousseline sprinkled with black coin dots, and piped around the ruffled cape with narrow black. Miss Keeney, who has acquired a golden sun tan, was in a frock of thinnest cocoa brown chiffon, fashioned with a tiny, floating cape.

Everybody was in the coolest costume they could muster and some of them were very lovely. Miss Marian Trumbull, who left yesterday to spend several days on Long Island, wore a sleeveless white tennis frock belted with Navy blue and white polka dotted silk, and a turban of the same material wound around her head, and clasped with a handsome diamond pin.

Mrs. Fred A. Britten, who with former Representative Britten, had just returned from a short stay in New York, looked charming in a frock of dark red and white chiffon, fashioned with a long skirt and small shoulder cape. Her black hair was parted sleekly in the middle and her carnelian earrings matched the deep red of her frock. Apparently she and Mr. Britten were continuing on to dinner, for she wore no hat.

Mrs. Francis A. Whitten, who is lingering in town, looked charming in a simple white sports frock with a wide brimmed hat of hyacinth blue felt, and Mrs. Nina Gore Vidal wore a loosely woven white frock with a huge hat of navy blue taffeta.

The men were in the majority at the party, but Mrs. Mark L. Bristol was there in a lovely chiffon frock of pale green and white with a large garden hat, and Mrs. Emil Hurja, who, with Mr. Hurja, has just returned from a fishing trip in Wisconsin, also wore a frock of white and green chiffon with a large white hat trimmed with narrow green velvet ribbons.

Miss Marie McIntyre was there with her father, the Secretary to the President, Mr. Marvin H. McIntyre, and nearby was the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Lawrence W. Robert, being very helpful as he passed sandwiches among the guests.

The Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Don Guillermo Patterson, had with him his very blonde daughter, Senorita Olga Patterson. The other of the two sisters, Senorita Zoe, is still recuperating from a recent motor accident.

Many Diplomats Attend.

To name but a few of the many and interesting guests at the party, there were the Chief of the Western European Division of the State Department, Mr. James Clement Dunn; the Minister of the Netherlands, Jonkheer H. M. van Haersma de With, who left yesterday to spend the week-end at Hot Springs, Va.; the third Secretary of the German Embassy and Frau Struve, the latter in a frock of chartreuse green; the first Secretary of the German Embassy, Herr Herbert Scholz; Mrs. Henry C. Corbin, in a sheer printed frock with a large red hat; Mrs. John Caswell, looking deliciously cool in a pale blue sports frock; Mr. Hugh D. Auchincloss, Mrs. William Cushman, in Alice blue with an enormous white hat trimmed with white flowers, and the Attache of the Belgian Embassy and Mme. Walravens.

Also the Minister of Norway, Mr. Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne; the Minister of Greece, Mr. Demetrios Sicilianos; the Charge d'Affaires of Egypt, Nicolas Khalil Bey; the Minister of Albania, Mr. Faik Konitza; the first Secretary of the British Embassy, Mr. Philip Mainwaring Broadmead, and the Secretary of the Italian Embassy, Signor Andrea Ferrero, both arriving from tennis, and wearing soft foulard scarfs in lieu of collars with their jackets and white flannels; the Chief of the Far Eastern Division of the State Department, Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck; Mr. Wynant Johnston, the Charge d'Affaires of Sweden, Baron Johan Beck-Friis, who will sail shortly to join his family in Europe, and the Commercial Counselor of the Legation, Mr. Per Wijkman, who will remain to take charge until the minister returns.

The young couple received a papal blessing yesterday by radiogram from the Vatican City. A program of organ musical will be given during the ceremony, by Mrs. Margaret Whelan McCoughlin.

The bride who will be given in marriage by her father, will wear a tailored suit of white crepe with a hat of white felt and will carry Belmont gardenias and lilies-of-the-valley. Mr. James Fallon will act as best man. Mrs. Gormley, mother of the bride, will wear a gown of red and white printed crepe with a wide white hat and a corsage of red and white carnations.

The young couple will leave for a motor trip in the North following the breakfast which will be given by the bride's parents in honor of the marriage. On their return they will be at home in the Westchester Apartments. The bride is a graduate of the Georgetown Visitation Convent and of Manhattenville College of the Sacred Heart in New York. Mr. Shea was graduated from Holy Cross College and the Georgetown University Law School.

Many Thrills Are Expected In Legion Horse Show Today

Pomp, Ceremony and Military Maneuvers to Be Added to Spectacular Horsemanship in Chevy Chase Charity Event.

Thrills! Frills Drills!

With this word officials in charge of the American Legion's charity horse show aptly describe the meet to be held in Rock Creek Park at Chevy Chase, Md., today to raise funds for the Montgomery County General Hospital.

Their description, though brief, is accurate, for spectacular horsemanship, pomp, ceremony and military maneuvers will be the order of the day from the hour of opening at 9:30 this morning until the close of the show late this afternoon.

The legion meet is the first major equine event of its kind held in the vicinity of Washington since the National Capital horse show two months ago, and the proud mounts of the leading barns in Maryland, Virginia and the District will be on demonstration in the 22 colorful classes that have been arranged by the Montgomery County former service men.

Gay 'Nineties to Ride.

Much color and not a little humor will be supplied by the Gay 'Nineties at the height of the afternoon's festivities. Harking back to the days of 1890-1900, exhibitors will don attire characteristic of that period and ride their horses or drive them to old-fashioned rigs.

More than a score have signified their intentions of entering this competition, which is a favorite one with show people in Virginia and New York, but which never has been staged in the Capital sector. Two silver trophies will be presented to the winner and the runner-up.

The military note will be lent by a unit of the Maryland National Guard, which will stage an exhibition drill and supervise a flag-raising ceremony, while the Sons of Legion Band from Takoma Park is to play at intervals during the day.

Pony Classes Planned.

Miss Hutton will make the presentation of the trophy in person at 2 o'clock after a quick trip across city with a motorcycle escort clearing her path through traffic.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney, of Upperville, will judge the hunter classes that feature the show. Mrs. Peggy Keith Hamilton, of Warrenton, will judge the pony and saddle horse events, while Mrs. Nina Carter Tabb, of Middleburg, and Mrs. Charles Bond, of Sandy Spring, will judge the Gay Nineties.

Hengstler Back From Parley In Buenos Aires

State Department Official Passed Three Months in South America.

Mr. Herbert Hengstler, chief of the Division of Foreign Service Administration of the State Department, returned yesterday from a three months' trip to South America. He was a member of the official party which went to Buenos Aires to attend the Pan American Conference.

Mr. Hengstler and members of his party were entertained during the trip in various places they visited. The United States Ambassador to Argentina, Mr. Alexander B. Weddell; the United States Minister to Uruguay, Mr. Julius Lay, and Mr. Spruille Braden, were the three American delegates to the conference. Mr. Julius C. Holmes, assistant chief of the Division of Protocol of the State Department, was secretary to the delegation, and Mr. Hengstler and Mr. Warren Kelchner were advisers.

Mr. Hengstler tells interesting stories of the trip from Buenos Aires to Santiaga, Chile, a part of which was made on mules. While Washingtonians were getting their first taste fo summer heat, the travelers were riding for hours through snow 4 and 6 feet deep. Describing the various customs of South America, one of which is dining at a very late hour, any time from 10 until 12 o'clock, Mr. Hengstler remarked that the earliest dinner he had while on the trip, was in the United States Embassy, at Buenos Aires, where Mrs. Weddell insists on the early hour of 9:30 o'clock for official dinners.

Mr. Kelchner, who made the trip with Mr. Hengstler up the west coast of South America, is visiting with his family in Pennsylvania. He will return to the Capital Monday. Mr. and Mrs. Holmes, who returned via the East Coast, will arrive today, and Mr. and Mrs. Braden lingered at the latter's former home in Chile, and will not return to their home in New York until next week.

Double-Toned Finger Tips Set A New Fashion

One Tint Over Another on Nails Adds Luster to Color.

By Dudley Harmon.
Pinch Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

ATTENTION, scent-hounds! A famous cosmetic house announces that one of its most popular perfumes, formerly priced at $7.50, can now be had in dram size for a dollar. Blossoms from hundreds of water lily lakes in Connecticut, California, Geneva, Switzerland, and other places, went to make up this refreshing concoction. When its haunting, lingering fragrance reaches your nostrils, you'll have no difficulty at all in imagining yourself transplanted to a cool lake's edge or loitering beside cool fountains and falls, babbling brooks or a quiet, shady pond covered with delicious blooms.

The water lilies for this perfume are not plucked until they are fully ripe, until all the fragrance, all the beauty, the exquisite delicacy of the flower lies open to the sun—and none but the pure white ones are used.

There is an interesting old legend attached to this bud. It seems that at one time the water lily was called a lotus and eating the buds was reputed to have the power to make you forget all tiresome trouble and care and that thereafter you would live only for pleasure. Of course this does not mean that you will fly off at any such tangent on using this delightful new scent, but it does mean that it will add greatly to your pleasure and to that of those around you who are lucky enough to get a whiff.

The result is a soft, scented cream which does not dry or burn. It pulls the hair out by the roots, instead of burning it out, the simplest and the safest method possible. No messy preparations are required ahead of time—no mixing and no heating. It costs only $3.50 and comes in a gay and pretty little jar.

New Depilatory Pleasant.

MOST of us have had at least one unpleasant experience with depilatories, which have harmed out skins in one way or another. This is because all depilatories are made with chemicals and sometimes these chemicals burn and sting. Also, many contain a bi-sulphate solution which is very harmful to the skin.

At last, however, some one has come forth with a hair remover made of pure, fragrant herbs. The woman who invented it—you'd recognize her name immediately if we mentioned it—has spent two years in perfecting the process. She has experimented with herbs from all over the world, blending and mixing until she arrived at the perfect combination.

A New Cocktail Idea.

HOSTESSES who go in for cocktail parties will find just what they've been looking for in the shape of a new hors-d'oeuvre board which a local department store is featuring. This board has the double advantage of being both practical and cunning at the same time. On the board, itself, which is oval and made of real California redwood, is perched a tiny wooden Chinaman. Or perhaps he is a cowboy or a Mexican bandit, depending on which design you choose. At any rate he is very lifelike and rakish and out of his big sombrero, or coolie hat, as the case may be, stick numerous little wooden toothpicks in different colors.

On these toothpicks hostesses may hang their tiny sausages and other delicacies of this kind. The toothpicks are colored with pure vegetable dye so that they will not contaminate the food. Furthermore, the picks can be replaced at any drug store.

If you don't go in for cocktails yourself, try giving one of these as a bridge prize—it will amuse and please your guests. They cost $1.45.

Fragile Girl, Real Jockey, Belies Side-Saddle Days

JESSICA WESTON, girl jockey, says she prefers her horses "wild-eyed and ready to go."

MANY OF US can remember side-saddle days, when young women in wide skirts and sailor hats bounced uncomfortably over fashionable bridle paths. Then a few brave maidens dared to ride astride and society finally conceded the grace and ease of that "modern manner."

Now there has been discovered a fragile, blue-eyed young person who rides up, shoulders forward, dust flying and crowds cheering at the judge's stand . . . Yes, she is a girl jockey, just arrived from the track at Agua Caliente, Mexico, for a summer in Washington.

"Jockeying isn't a gentle activity," said Miss Jessica Weston, looking extremely gentle and dainty in a dimity frock, as she sat in a sun-chair outside her residence at 1628 K street. "It's hard work. The race itself is a relaxation. But weeks and even months of training precede it.

"I must exercise my horse—run him up and down the track innumerable times, and give him a four hour rub-down once a day—until I'm a Charley horse myself!" She remarked that woman's equality with man has become an uncomfortable concept at the racetrack. "They ought to concede woman her right to frailty and allow her the service of a stable boy with a strong pair of shoulders."

There was a race at Agua Caliente in which her horse was pushed to the railing and horse and rider went down on the hard turf. Miss Weston now looks quite complete but she says she cracked legs, ribs and collar bone in that accident.

The girl jockey has sought stable companionship all through her adventurous life. When she was a diminutive English lassie of seven, her father, a Liverpool jockey, gave her a pony to "break in." "Like throwing a child into a river and telling it to swim," she laughed. "But I did ride him, after a few spills, tears and bruises."

When her family moved to this country, Jessica rode her farm horse to school bareback. She merited a saddle when she entered high school. Then both her parents died and Jessica was out on her own, when her playmates were just beginning to go out on "dates." She tried gathering grapes for a winery in California, clerking in a police court, waiting on tables, beautifying milady's hairdress.

"But that was all such quiet, silly work. I decided to become a jockey, and so I did . . . I don't know whether I'd advise many other girls to follow in my hoof prints. Jockeying, I realize, is an uncommon occupation for a girl. It's even more exciting than piloting a plane, for one depends on a live creature—his strength and his fancies—and not upon mechanism.

Seafood, Salad, Fruit Dessert An Ideal Menu

Crabmeat Is Appetizing Served With Biscuits and Iced Tea.

By Dorothea Duncan.

CHILLED SEAFOOD plus an excellent dressing, a piquant relish or shivering molded salad, and a tart fruity dessert form a triple attraction for hot weather menus that is hard to beat.

When planning a menu of this kind, consider first your type of seafood. Seafood can be ruined or glorified depending upon the kind of accompaniments you choose to serve with it. The sauce or dressing must bring out the hidden flavor but never smother the delicacy of the meat. Give tart flavors preference over sweet ones when choosing a salad or dessert if you want them to compliment the seafood.

Here are some combinations that will find favor at your table. Let's consider first the glory of the Chesapeake crabmeat. Select large lumps of meat and inspect each piece for hidden bits of shell. Chill the crabmeat thoroughly. Season it ever so lightly with salt and pepper and pile upward in mounds on crisp beds of lettuce. Sprinkle with paprika. Tuck a fat wedge of lemon close to the crabmeat.

Two deviled egg halves with a mustardy tange should be nested in lettuce on one side of the crab meat and sweet cucumber pickles at the other. For piquance and brilliant color add a small mold of cardinal salad, also nested in lettuce.

Serve a tart mayonnaise separately and vinegar in a cruet, for both are popular with crabmeat salad. Hot, fluffy biscuits with plenty of butter and iced tea are logical accompaniments. Lemon sherbet and plain sponge cake make an excellent dessert.

Cardinal Salad.

1 package lemon-flavored gelatine
1 cup of warm water
¾ cup beet juice
3 tablespoons vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons scraped onion
1 tablespoon prepared horseradish
¾ cup celery, diced
1 cup cooked beets, diced

Dissolve gelatine in warm water. Add beet juice, vinegar, salt, onion and horseradish. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in celery and beets. Turn into mold.

Fresh boiled salmon, chilled and flaked or sliced makes an interesting beginning for a salad plate menu. To prevent the salmon from breaking while cooking tie it in a bag made of cheesecloth. Drop the bag into boiling water and when the water boils again, turn down the flame and let the salmon simmer until it will flake. Beware of overcooking the salmon, for you want the flesh to be firm and the color bright. When the salmon has been thoroughly chilled serve it in nests of crisp lettuce and top with a tart mayonnaise

To enhance the salmon further, add a lettuce cup of sour cream potato salad and a small cucumber and pineapple salad molded in lemon gelatine. Serve iced coffee and cheese straws and as a grand and final flourish bring in a lime refrigerator pie.

Lime Refrigerator Pie.

1½ teaspoons unflavored gelatine
5 tablespoons cold water
4 egg yolks
½ cup sugar
5 tablespoons lime juice
4 egg whites
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla

Soak the gelatin in the cold water for five minutes. Place the egg yolks in a double boiler with the sugar and lime juice, mix thoroughly, and cook until thick and creamy, beating constantly with a rotary egg beater. Remove from the stove and stir in the soaked gelatin. Beat the 4 egg whites until stiff, then gradually add the sugar and vanilla, and beat until smooth. Pour the cooked mixture into the stiffly beaten egg whites. Mix well and pour into one large or two small previously baked pie shells. Place in a cool place until firm. When ready to serve, cover with whipped cream which has been sweetened to taste and flavored with one-half teaspoon vanilla.

What TODAY Means

"Cancer."

IF JULY 20 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m.

Every problem has a solution. Clear thinking, concentrated effort and perseverance, usually result in a satisfactory means being found for the disintegration of vexing issues. You may find on this day the right way out of a quandry that has burdened your thoughts if you rid yourself of anxiety. Conditions favorable to your personal affairs are likely to prevail. You may not realize the good turn until a definite manifestation is made in the very near future.

Be receptive to friendly overtures, eliminating feelings of resentment, prejudice or hatred so that you will not interfere with the beneficial waves of good fortune. A good day for mixing freely with friends, especially if impromptu affairs can be arranged. Married and engaged couples, and those seeking sweet solace in the companionship of some one exceptionally congenial, will find that complimentary remarks will be greatly appreciated.

If a woman and July 20 is your birthday, be guided by your own intuition if you wish to be successful. Make it a habit to form your own decisions. You may be inclined to hesitate in giving answers to important matters until you have had the reaction of someone else whose opinion, after all, may not be as good as your own. If you are self-reliant your progress should be rapid. Be careful you do not put too much faith in flattery.

Be cautious of any friend who selfishly tries to monopolize your time or wean you away from other friends, for if you succumb to his wiles, deep regrets may come too late. Office detail, or clerical work, music, teaching and an artistic line of activity are likely to be among the vocations which will provide the most congenial employment for you.

The child born on July 20 is very likely, when it reaches its majority, to want to fashion its own career; and if let alone will, in all probability, be very successful.

If a man and July 20 is your natal day, if you have sufficient confidence in your own ability and do not permit the opinions of others to sway your judgment, you will accomplish results well worth the efforts you have put forth. Construction work, architecture, engineering, printing or salesmanship may offer the best opportunities through which to make money.

Underwood & Underwood.
Miss Annabel Matthews, of the United States Board of Tax Appeals, is shown above in her apartment beside a portrait of herself painted last summer by Chester Warner Slack, of Cape Cod. Mr. Slack was a pupil of Miss Matthews when she taught school at Gainesville, Ga.

She Also Has Achieved Distinction as a Hostess, Likes to Cook and Is Talented in Designing Clothes.

By Sara Roberts Millhouse.

IT'S A LONG span from teaching grade school children in a little Georgia town to sitting as the only woman confrere of 15 men on the United States Board of Tax Appeals. Apparently there is little connection between the two. But not to Annabel Matthews — the Honorable Annabel Matthews, officially. She not only had made that span a bridge to achievement—she also feels that her 12 years of school teaching, far from being a tiresome grind, helped lay the foundation of her success.

Today, in the fifth year of occupying her unusual position, Miss Matthews does not discredit the value of her early years of teaching. Graduated from college at 17, she began teaching to become one of the wage earners of her family.

"Escape from teaching? Why no—I loved it!" she exclaimed from a long, comfortably modern couch in her apartment at 3041 Sedgwick street. The room, with its dark richness of polished wood against light background of white walls and rugs, blue and yellow furnishings, reflected the serene character, the charming distinction of its owner. For this woman who deals with the cold, hard facts of tax law, who unravels involved legal knots, has the poised graciousness and dignity of the old South.

Descendant of Maj. Lindsay.

Descendant of Maj. John Lindsay, Revolutionary officer whose services were rewarded with a grant of land "agreeable to the rank of major," Miss Matthews told of her early ambitions on the plantation which had come down to her family in Georgia.

"I always thought that if I were a man I would like to be a lawyer. But being a woman in the South, it never occurred to me.

"Teaching seemed the only profession open. It was never a grind or rut—rather, an adventure. I have found that the experience of those 12 years has helped me in everything I have attempted. It helps me now, not only in arriving at a tax decision, but in expressing my views so that the reader will agree with my conclusions.

"I don't like to generalize about men and women," she smiled in reply to a question. "A great many women—and some men—take everything in business in too personal a way. Meeting problems in an important way will help women as well as men. But I think ability is more a question of the individual than of sex."

"I don't think of myself in reference to my work as a woman," she continued. "I am just one of the members of the board. And I believe the other members consider me in the same light. They do not expect more or less of me because I am a woman."

Takes Test for Clerk.

Nor has she encountered resentment in the attitude of men lawyers who have appeared before her. "Some of them seem a little amazed," she said, but after they get started, I believe they find that they are not up against any insuperable object in a woman judge.

At 14, she entered Brenau College at Gainsville, Ga., as a sophomore. When she had taught 12 years, her brother Benjamin, on a visit home, advised her to take the Civil Service examination for first grade clerk. She did—because the $900 a year clerk's salary represented an increase over her $50 a month teaching salary.

A month later, with top rating, Annabel Matthews, at 29, became a clerk in the income tax division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The 16th Amendment had just been adopted and the Revenue Act of 1913 levying income taxes had been passed. The Government was swamped with returns, queries and puzzles.

From filing clerk, she advanced to subject file, then to the rules and regulations section where she was promoted to head of a sub-section. The same patience and clear thinking, the imagination and intelligent insight which had made her a good teacher enabled her to send lucid answers to puzzled taxpayers. Here, too, her natural interest and desire to turn all experience to her advantage led her to delve into foreign tax law.

Starts Studying Law.

Meanwhile, she saw that a full legal background would help her—would lay the foundation for a broader field of work and promotions. In 1918 she began studying law at night at the Washington College of Law. She was gradutaed in three years with honors, taking the prize for moot court work. At 35, she passed the difficult District bar examination.

Four years later, as the second woman to receive that honor, she was assigned as an attorney to the general counsel's office of the bureau. During her five years there, she went to international conferences on double taxation held under the auspices of the League of Nations at London and Geneva. As assistant to the American delegate, she was the only woman participant. Her status was "the expert in the United States service who knew most about the taxation of non-residents, aliens, and foreign corporation under the Federal tax laws."

In 1930, when a vacancy occurred on the board Annabel Matthews became the first woman member.

The board, while it functions as a court, is not in the judicial branch of the Government, and its members do not wear robes. To the only woman member who has a fine perception about what to wear, clothes are important to professional women. When presiding at a tax hearing, she always wears plain, simply cut dresses, usually dark, with perhaps a touch of white. "And I always wear long sleeves," she added. "They lend dignity."

The board hears appeals of taxpayers who, the government contends, owe additional income or estate taxes, and to determine whether the deficiency must be paid. Miss Matthews, besides presiding often in the Capital, has held hearings in New York, Chicago, Spokane, Seattle, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Oklahoma City, Omaha, Atlanta, Charleston, W. Va.; Charleston, S. C.; Tampa, Miami and Jacksonville, Fla. Much more time is spent preparing and writing decisions than in actually hearing cases.

Celebrated Hostess.

Her friends know her better as one of Washington's most charming hostesses than as the arbiter of tax decisions. No invitation is more prized than to one of Annabel Matthew's informal little Sunday evening teas or parties. There, interesting people meet, have an informally gay time, enjoy brilliant conversation, and unusual food.

During those long years as a government clerk, attending law school, Miss Matthews found time to design and make her own clothes.

Thumb Sucking And Nail Biting Primal Habits

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

FEW habits of infancy remind us more forcibly of our primal animal instincts than do those that involve sucking the fingers, toes, lips or articles of clothing. The child learns at an early age that he can secure a certain amount of comfort and satisfaction through putting things into his mouth. In this way the paint is sometimes sucked off toys; and buttons, marbles, and even safety pins find their way into the baby's mouth.

Some writers associate thumb sucking with a state of nervous exaltation. This may occur periodically; the baby trembles and the face is flushed. Symptoms of a mild exhaustion and fatigue often follow. There may be a few cases of this type, but as a rule the habit is interpreted as an effort on the part of the child to satisfy the early taste instinct.

Habit Wears Away.

Fortunately if thumb sucking can be controlled for several weeks and if the child is adequately fed the habit is inclined to wear away. Greater success will follow the use of a proper method if it is employed early rather than after the habit has become firmly established, that is, before the child will miss the apparent comfort of the thumb or toe. Correction of the habit is important because of its possible effect in deforming the bones of the jaws and hence the face.

Nail biting is an even more obstinate habit and is a nervous manifestation that reflexly indicates disposition and that influence both mental and moral self-control. Usually the nails will be bitten in time of stress, anxiety, or nervous tension. When the child is happy and his mind is occupied with pleasant things, nail biting is not indulged in. Aside from the lack of control and its damage to character, the habit results in deformed nails and even misshapen fingers. Occasionally loose bits of skin are nibbled away until the appearance of the fingers has been decidedly altered.

Imitation a Factor.

In the formation of the habit imitation is a factor. Many a parent has reformed in this respect because of the example set before the child. Next in importance is the avoidance of any nervous or emotional state that may stimulate the habit. Teachers have observed that when there is a puzzling problem to solve or a difficult question to answer at examination time, nail biting will be unconsciously indulged in as an accompaniment of concentration. We can relieve the occasion for the habit—remove the stimulus—by saving the child every avoidable nervous strain. As he grows older pride and the criticism of playmates will prove important. If he can be brought to a realization of the untidiness of the habit wise parents may help the situation by the employment of a judicious system of rewards.

Nothing is quite so conducive to the cure of nervous habits of all sorts as plenty of restful sleep and good food. The unusually nervous child needs more rather than less sleep and the best of food.

WOMEN The WORLD OVER

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I read your fine advice to heartsick persons and I know the advice you give helps them. I wonder if you could help me?

I will be 22 years old this week. I am married to the kindest man ever. He is 30 and we have three children, two boys aged 2 and 4, and a baby girl 11 months old. My husband has steady work and I'm thankful for that, but he's not making enough for us to get on our feet. He was out of work so long.

* * * *

We have so many small bills that we can't possibly pay everybody at once and everybody wants his money. We are trying to buy our small home. I am so worried I'm sick all the time. My husband who always has been so good and kind, has taken to drinking, which he never did before. But he says he has to get relief somewhere. He's late getting home evenings, which worries me terribly. We used to be so happy, paid all our bills and got along fine.

* * * *

But now——. Well, you just can't pay for milk, bread, clothes, home, etc., when you have so little money. Can't you help me? Tell me something I could do to make a little money at home for a while; just long enough to get these bills paid. Then we could be happy again. Once they are settled we can get along fine on my husband's salary. All we have now is worry, bills, judgments, people trying to collect. I'm nearly crazy. Please help me.

Could I address letters for someone, or anything like that? I can write pretty well and I finished high school, but I can't leave my babies to work in an office. Won't you please answer this in the paper? Thanking you, I am, yours sincerely, M. H. G.

The Plight of Many.

DEAR M. H. G.: In recent weeks, I have been receiving an increasing number of letters conveying appeals for help similar to yours. Much as I would like to give the directly helpful answer, I must confess I am no such miracle worker. Our country, as you know, is inundated with millions of persons classified as "unemployed" and "unemployable." Countless applicants, many of them qualified to do valuable work, stand in line for every job. Yet, in every instance, all but one must necessarily be turned away.

* * * *

I am deeply touched by your belief (and the belief of countless other correspondents) that I can suggest "something . . . to do to make a little money at home for a while, but I must in honesty say that you ask an impossibility. If your own knowledge of your abilities, your own mental resourcefulness, doesn't dictate the answer to that question, then surely I can not supply the answer for you.

* * * *

There is only one suggestion (and that of another sort) which I can offer for relieving your predicament. You say you are trying to buy your small home. It is possible you are trying to complete the transaction on a high-cost, short-term mortgage basis. You may be meeting payments on the home at the expense of other creditors. Should this be true, it might be wise to arrange for a refinancing of the mortgage on a long-term basis, over a period of 15 to 20 years. By cutting down payments on the home, and by exercising the most stringent economy commensurate with health, you may be able to satisfy your other creditors. At least, you would be showing your good faith. If such is the case, go to the right building and loan association and state your proposition.

* * * *

Right now, I think you should be guided by the advice of a business man or banker whose judgment and integrity you respect, one who can reasonably be counted on to take a friendly, humanitarian interest in your predicament. Seek out the best banker or business man in your community, tell him the whole story, and ask him to help you in drafting a practicable plan for taking care of your every day expenses and your outstanding obligations. Don't be spineless and supplicating. Show a willingness to stand on your own feet (which you have, indeed, revealed in your foregoing letter).

* * * *

The best antidote for worry is constructive action. By proclaiming in the open market that you are doing all you can to liquidate your indebtedness and meet your obligations, you should command respect and consideration from your creditors.

* * * *

With your husband breaking under the strain, to the extent that he is drinking and beginning to keep irregular hours, it is imperative that you act at once, before he loses his reputation for dependability. If he can be given some backing, if only moral backing; if he can be shown the right road to take through the present maze, even though it may be a narrow and a hard road, he will be helped to recapture his self respect and his self confidence. But this must be done before he has acquired the habit of drink; before he has relaxed his grip on reality and on his powers of self control.

* * * *

I think the most important contribution you can make, under the circumstances, is to get the situation under mental and mathematical control. If there is something else you can better do, your own ingenuity must suggest it. M. H.

REP. CLIFTON A. WOODRUM.

Woodrum Hits Fear of Taxes To Cut Wealth

Denies Roosevelt Plans to Give Cash from Rich to the Poor.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., July 19.—Speaking of President Roosevelt's "soak the rich" tax plan as our "Recovery Tax Program," Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of the Sixth Virginia District, addressing a meeting of the Young Democratic Club of Loudoun County in the courthouse at Leesburg this evening, said:

"The new tax bill does not contemplate seizing one man's wealth and turning it over to another but advocates redistribution of opportunity to create wealth through use."

He pointed out that the President is not unmindful of the fact that our real wealth consists in employing capital and labor in production. "This problem has a real bearing upon Government spending," he said, "and the criticism that the Government is spending too much money for emergency purposes overlooks the causes of the emergency, which lie deep in our economic structure."

In defending the New Deal Woodrum said that at the beginning of the Administration, real problems were found of a social and economic nature that demanded immediate heroic effort and it was necessary to resort to a degree of experimentation which brought out the NRA. Woodrum pointed out the sound and helpful fundamentals involved in NRA and stated that "any fair and impartial students of the fundamentals of the NRA will find that in spite of its shortcomings and defects it served a useful purpose in an emergency."

The speaker said he did not believe there is any need at the present moment for any change in the United States Constitution, but that "it is well within the realms of possibility that a rapidly changing social and econoimc order may some day bring us to the point where we shall feel the need of changing in some degree our Federal Constitution especially with reference to a clarification of the powers of the Federal Government in dealing with interstate commerce."

The speaker was introduced by Gen. William Mitchell, of Middleburg. James di Zerega, president of the local organization, presided. Mrs. John Galleher, chairman of the program committee, introduced Gen. Mitchell.

22,000-Acre Park Pushed In Maryland

Change in Plans Gives Washington County Larger Part.

Lakes, Playground and Hiking Trails Are Projected.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 19.—More acreage in Washington County than at first planned will be included in the proposed Maryland-Catoctin National Park. The original plans called for 22,000 acres, much of which lies in Frederick County.

The original plans of the Government have been revised, it was learned, and where property owners refused to option their land to the Government, acreage will be obtained elsewhere.

The proposed park will extend into Washington County to the vicinity of Camp Ritchie, Maryland National Guard camp, and Edgemont.

The proposed park, G. B. Williams, project manager in charge of the investigation and planning, announced today, is part of the Emergency Work Relief Program, and the area was selected by the National Park Service through the Division of Land Utilization, Rural Land Planning and Development, of the Resettlement Administration. Labor will be recruited from local relief rolls and employment will be given to many persons locally as soon as the land is acquired.

Rich in Scenic Beauty.

The proposed park area is rich in rustic scenery. Nestled in a primitive setting of rolling hills and valleys which spread from rugged peaks, the scenic beauty is expected to lure thousands.

The area is particularly adapted, Williams said, to the establishment of camps for families, children, industrial and organized groups, and one of the fundamental objectives underlying the development is to make recreation facilities available at the lowest possible cost to people of limited incomes.

Plans contemplate the damming of streams to provide lakes for swimming, boating and fishing. Suitable portions will be utilized for playgrounds and sport areas, but the natural cover and primitiveness will be preserved.

Skiing Facilities Planned.

Trails will be laid out for hiking and nature study. For winter sports, facilities for skiing are contemplated. Rustic cabins, shelters and buildings for various diversions are planned.

This project, Williams said, has received preliminary approval of the Federal Government. Its completion, however, depends on a satisfactory blocking out of acreage at a fair price.

Social and civic organizations of Baltimore, Frederick and Hagerstown already have given their approval of the project and are cooperating. C. C. Freeburn has charge of the land acquisition and preparation of property maps, with headquarters here.

Maryland Aids in Federal War Upon Sponge-Enemy of Oyster

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 19.—Judge Robert F. Duer, chairman of the State conservation commission, announced today that the facilities of Maryland's biological laboratory at Solomons Island have been turned over to Federal scientists studying the boring sponge, blamed for much of the depletion of Maryland's oyster beds in recent years.

All the facilities of the laboratory, which is under the direction of Dr. R. V. Truitt, have been placed at the disposal of the Federal men. Boats and other mechanical aids are also being furnished. How long the study will take, and what its cost will be could not be learned.

The great rock area in Tangier Sound, once noted for its oysters, now produces only a negligible quantity due to infection by the oyster sponge, also known as the boring sponge. The highly productive bars along the little Choptank River were 90 per cent destroyed by the sponge during 1932, Judge Duer said.

The study of the sponge is only a part of the Federal Government's search for means of controlling enemies of the oyster. This widespread study was mapped out by the United States Bureau of Fisheries, after United States Senator George Radcliffe had appealed for help for the oyster industry.

Sacred Hymns Sung on Hills By White-Clad Choir of 1,000

Five States Represented at Harrisonburg Music Fete.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 19.—A white-clad choir of 1,000 voices representing churches in five States sang sacred hymns from the slopes of Vesper Hill to an audience of 5,000 tonight in a concert that climaxed the fifth annual music festival at Massanetta Springs.

At dusk the mighty choir marched in a processional to the hill, where they presented the concert in the open air, under direction of Dr. John Finley Williamson, of Westminister Choir School, Princeton, N. J.

The First Lutheran Church of Johnstown, Pa., was awarded first place in the mixed adult choir contest held as part of the festival program. This group, directed by Mrs. Harriet Weigle Nicely, won first prize in the Mountain Lake Park festival recently.

Second place here was won by the Church of the Bretheren of Hagerstown, Md., Raymond K. Hollinger, director. The First Presbyterian Church of Harrisonburg, directed by Miss Edna Shaffer, placed third.

Folk music contests, conducted by John Powell, Richmond composer, and Mrs. Annabell Morris Buchanan, were held this afternoon. Emory Sloop, of Harrisonburg, took first place in the old fiddlers' contest.

The Shenandoah Mountaineers, of Harrisonburg, directed by Ralph Michael, were winners of the mountain band contest, with the Valley Ramblers, directed by Ward Allen, second.

Winners of the artists' solo contests included Romayne Beyard, Hagerstown, Md., and Arthur Wake, Strasburg, Va., baritone.

Elsie Hoge Donald, of Lexington, was awarded first place in the girls' solo contest

Co-op Houses Reduce University Expenses

Berkeley, Cal. (AP).—The energetic experiment of co-operative student boarding houses under university supervision may do more than anything else to spread education. University of California authorities believe.

With several units already operating at a student cost of approximately $15 a month, an apartment house is to be leased to house 230 other students who will be able to attend school on $18 a month—as cheap, or cheaper, than they could live at home.

All work in the houses is co-operative, and the main actual purchases are in food, household supplies and utility services.

Cost of Relief Big Problem At Baltimore

Can Not Estimate Help They May Expect From Projects.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 19.—Maryland relief officials, faced with a Washington order that Federal contributions to direct relief would end November 1, said today they were uncertain whether they would have sufficient funds to finance the added burden.

The salient facts of the Maryland relief situation today were:

The State relief bill for all purposes is now on a basis of approximately $14,000,000 a year.

Of that amount, the State is to provide $3,500,000 from revenue from the 1 per cent gross receipts tax—which expires March 31.

The State will have sufficient funds for its unemployed and unemployables only if the Federal public works program provides employment for persons who are now drawing $8,500,000 annually in relief funds.

With the beginning of payment of old age pensions—expected to start about October 1—the State will provide funds amounting to $1,500,000 yearly for that purpose, which probably will relieve relief rolls of some of the burden.

The State is to provide two-thirds of the cost, the local units one-third which makes a maximum contribution from State and local governments of $2,000,000 a year for old age pensions.

State Relief Administrator Harry Greenstein said today he was unwilling to "guess" whether the public works program would provide enough employment to cut the relief burden sufficiently.

"The answer to the whole problem is that it is so tremendously difficult to predict in July the conditions that may exist in November," he said.

"The conditions depend to a great extent on two things. These are the ability of the works program to absorb persons from the relief roll and the economic situation at that time. There also enters into the picture the pending Federal social security bill, embracing old-age pensions, care for the blind and children's aid.

"Probably the most important in this picture is the extent to which the works program will absorb unemployed from the relief rolls.

"It must be remembered that there are a great many white-collar workers who may not be absorbed by this program. In addition, it is difficult to determine who is and who is not unemployable or employable."

Lone Sheriff Scours Mountain For Man Who Killed 2 Deputies

By the Associated Press.

Jonesville, Va., July 19.—Sheriff R. F. Giles of Lee County, known for his fearlessness, today took up a lone pursuit of Green Allen Brooks, 71, mountain rifleman, accused of slaying two officers yesterday near Cumberland Gap.

Working alone, as he did last year when he went into Tennessee to track down three robbers who held up the Rose Hill Bank, the sheriff this morning followed a trail he felt sure would lead him to the fugitive, who fled on foot and muleback after shooting down the two men from his doorway.

While the sheriff tracked his man, a posse of officers from southwest Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee, aided by bloodhounds, also pressed the hunt.

The searchers are well armed, as it is believed Brooks, a crack rifleman, will shoot it out with officers when found after having been named the perpetrator of one of the most sensational crimes in Lee County in many years.

At an inquest yesterday, Squire Jim Willis declared Brooks did "willfully kill" Arch Redmon, deputy sheriff, and Robert Bailey, county policeman, as they were leading Luther Poore past the home of Brooks, his father-in-law. They had arrested Poore on a warrant charging him with embezzlement in Middlesboro, Ky. Poore was locked in jail here after the shooting.

Funeral services for Redmon and Bailey will be held tomorrow at their homes near Gibson Station, in the western tip of Lee County. Jailer Marshall Giles, of Jonesville, said.

City Forbids Circuses Due To Paralysis

Richmond Takes Action as Precaution With Disease Spreading.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 19. — The circus won't come to town here this summer, and possibly not anywhere in Virginia, on account of the prevalence of infantile paralysis in the State, health authorities said today.

Dr. W. Brownley Foster, Richmond public welfare director, announced he had notified two circuses, scheduled to appear here August 12, that they would not be permitted to perform.

He said he acted after consulting Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, who agreed that circuses traveling from community to community and attracting children in large numbers would have a tendency to spread the disease.

Dr. Riggin intimated he might make the ban State-wide.

These developments came soon after advice to Virginians to call in a physician for any suspicious illness was given by the State health department as 11 new cases of infantile paralysis drove the total since June 1 to 159, of which 107 were recorded in July.

New cases reported today were distributed as follows: Buckingham, 1; Campbell, 1; Cumberland, 1; Petersburg City, 1; Richmond City, 3; Pittsylvania, 3; Russell, 1. It was Buckingham's first reported case.

A decrease has been noticed in reports from the south central part of the State, where the first outbreak in Virginia was noted, but this does not mean other cases may not be registered in that region, Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, said.

Late reports to the department have indicated the spread of the disease to practically every part of the State except the seashore resorts.

Stating the severity of the cases is not greater than in previous years, Dr. Riggin said "Each individual case should be considered serious in itself, but not necessarily to a community."

Five, Big-Time, Midseason Screen Specials Are Booked by Warners for Dog-Days

Cool Theaters Are Factor in Killing Taboo

Heat Is No Longer Threat; a Week of Varied Fare; Amusement Notes.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

I do not mean, at the moment, the metamorphosis that has made it all right to speak right up and say "scotch and soda" instead of cautiously whispering "a cup of tea, please," with a sly wink at the waiter, but have in mind more particularly the matter of booking summertime screen entertainment in the downtown, first-run picture houses. The old order changeth there, too.

For instance, the Warner Brothers, through John J. Payette, their general manager in the Washington territory, announce "Warner's Midsummer Jubilee," which is translated to signify five weeks of exceptional hot weather diversion beginning with the week of July 26.

Films which ordinarily would have been held for release in the cooler temperatures of the regular fall and winter season are to be shown during the dog days. This courageous booking coup, if that is what it is, has been inspired, one is led to believe, by the extraordinary business attracted to the Earle Theater by Grace Moore in "Love Me Forever," during a stretch of the summer's most unbearable heat and humidity.

The five attractions comprising the "Jubilee" are made up of four films from the Warner home lots and one from Paramount.

"Gondolier" Makes First Splash.

The procession will start on July 26, with "Broadway Gondolier," co-starring Dick Powell and Joan Blondell, with Adolphe Menjou, Louise Fazenda, Maxine Doyle, Ted Fio Rito and his band, the Mills Brothers and others of note in support.

Bette Davis and George Brent will come along next in "Front Page Woman," a fast-moving, wise-cracking screen comedy-drama adapted from a magazine story, "Women Are Bum Newspapermen." Winifred Shaw, who made so many friends in Washington during her recent week of personal appearances with Phil Regan at the Earle, heads the supporting cast of this one.

The third Warner production on the list of midsummer specials will be "The Irish In Us," which reunites those belligerent pals of the screen, Jimmy Cagney and Pat O'Brien, with Frank McHugh and Olivia de Havilland in support.

A screen adaptation of a Broadway hit also will take part in the parade. This will be "Page Miss Glory," starring Marion Davies, with a supporting cast that includes Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien, Mary Astor, Lyle Talbot, Patsy Kelly and many more.

Paramount's Contribution.

The Paramount release that appears in the line-up of dog-day delights is "Accent on Youth," the camera rendition of another Broadway stage hit, in which the principal roles are taken by Sylvia Sidney and Herbert Marshall, with Phillip Reed prominent in an outstanding associate cast.

It will be recalled that "Accent on Youth" was the play that opened last spring's eleventh annual season of the National Theater Players while still a reigning hit in New York.

Augmenting these interesting screen attractions will be a succession of special stage bookings at the Earle, for which General Manager Payette now is in negotiation. Leo Carrillo, co-star with Grace Moore in "Love Me Forever," is already set, of course, for the week of August 2.

Steps are now being taken to include another famous radio orchestra among the headline offerings to lend further luster to this happy emancipation from the ironclad strictures of the old, unrefrigerated days, when presenting anything but the veriest tripe on a silver platter—pardon, sheet—was looked upon as a waste of both money and effort on which the only return to the exhibitor was inevitably a worse headache than the one he had planned would do him from Memorial to Labor Day.

A brief, backstage good-by visit to Cross and Dunn's dressing room, at the Earle last night, elicited the casual information that last week's local occupancy of the headline spot in the stage show marked their first American appearance since their return home from a triumphant six weeks in London. On the other side, they appeared at the foremost 'alls and swankiest cafes and were such an instant hit that the average length of their turn during the month and a half ran up to 40 minutes from the average 15 or 20. Their encores just about doubled the running time of their act and, then, the only way they could finish was to sing a song they were sure nobody would like to choke off the applause. They had much the same experience at the Earle last week, being, as you might say, in a class by themselves among male vocal duos. And they are a couple of nice guys in the bargain.

The Torch Bearers!

Tonight, the Bartfield Players of Washington will present an effective acting version of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" in Annapolis, Md., as the first engagement in a series of week-end tours to nearby Maryland and Virginia cities during the summer season.

The Bartfield Players are recruited from among well-known actors and actresses in the Capital who have appeared successfully with the Washington Community Players and the Shakespeare Society of Washington.

Their production of "Romeo and Juliet" has been directed by Esther Galbraith, with settings by Howard Whitfield and costumes by Christine Stewart.

Mr. Whitfield, as Romeo, and Edythe Goldman, as Juliet, head the cast, which also includes Maurice Jarvis, as Friar Lawrence; Mabel Wilcox Owens, as the nurse; Miss Galbraith, as Lady Capulet; James M. Rawls, as Paris; Harry Crow, as Montague; Stanley Prothero, as Peter; William J. McLean, as Escalus, Prince of Verona; Hugh Smith, as Capulet; Robert Duke, as Mercutio; A. L. Diket, as Tybalt, and Willaim Milton, as Benvolio.

Following their first "road" appearance tonight, the Bartfield Players will return to the Capital and present their second performance at Catholic University here on July 26, one week hence.

The special bus to the Roadside Theater will make its second weekly Friday trip tonight, leaving the Riggs Bank Dupont Circle branch on Connecticut avenue at the circle at 8 o'clock and arriving at the barn theater, out beyond Bethesda on the Rockville pike, in ample time for the first curtain of "To Die at Dawn," described as the most thrilling melodrama the Roadsiders have essayed to date. Last week about half a busload made the trip to and from the Roadside by this means and were highly pleased with the comfortable and speedy service in both directions. A full load is expected to make the trip tonight. The bus remains at the theater until after the final curtain to bring its passengers back to town.

"You Pays Your Money, Etc."

Even a cursory survey of the cinema bills opening in the first-run area today must convince the picturegoer that the new week is one of unusual variety in the downtown sector. There are adventure of more than one kind, romance, simple, idyllic drama; bitter satire, serio-comic mystery and music for those who like any, or all, of these things.

Among the intelligentsia, if there is any such thing, primary interest no doubt will center in the bitterly vitriolic etching of a thoroughgoing cad that Ben Hecht and Charlie MacArthur have embossed upon their story of "The Scoundrel." The role is played in his customary impeccable manner, close-clipped speech and all, by Noel Coward.

Thrills, With Music.

The thrill-seekers will find their tastes catered to—one judges from the advance reports, a few screen trailers and a preview or two—in "The Triumph of Sherlock Holmes" and "Sanders of the River"—not to mention, in modified degree, "College Scandal"—and in two of these the music will be forthcoming. Paul Robeson, star of the Edgar Wallace yarn at the Fox, has opportunity to display his matchless barytone voice and at the Earle the sophs and coeds put on a show while their pals are being knocked off, one at a time, by someone you'll never guess.

The idyllic business will be discovered in Gene Stratton Porter's "The Keeper of the Bees" and for the sophisticates—over and above those who will go in for the heavier dosage at the Palace—"No More Ladies," happily, seems to have grown fast to F street.

If diversity is what you have been waiting for, here it is. If diversity is not what you have been waiting for, here it is, anyway. So what?

Frustration Note.

Yesterday afternoon, when Mr. Olson and Mr. Hull, two of The Post's City Room B.'s bright young men, were racing along at some 800 or 900 words a minute on what I took to be noiseless Smith typewriters, a very elegant last line suggested itself.

It had something to do with "The noiseless young men on their flying L. C.'s." Only they turned out to be Underwoods!

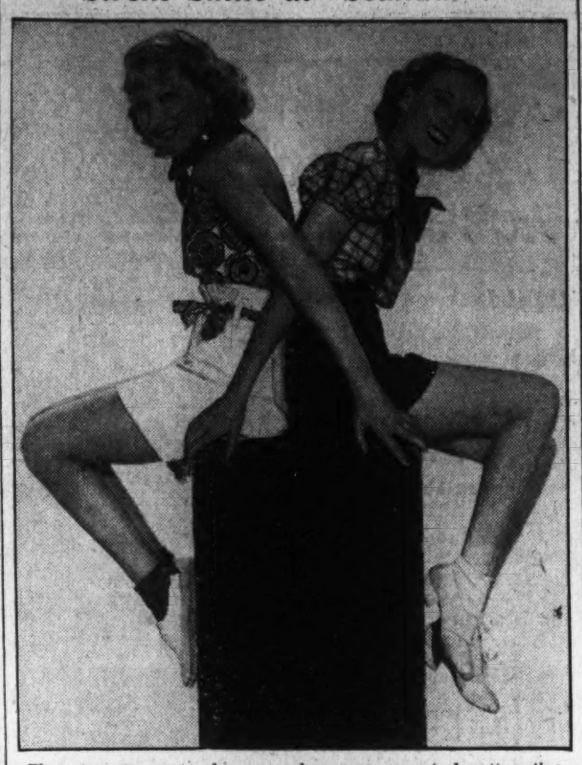
Sirens Smile at "Scandal"!



These two gay young charmers, whose arms seem to be attempting to say, "cross marks the spot, etc.," evidently feel little concern over the mysterious murders that occur in "College Scandal," the picture in which they are to be seen on the Earle screen, beginning today. The blonde on the left is Joyce Compton; the darker co-ed on the right, Wendy Barrie. Both have important roles in a lively picture that combines college theatricals with shuddery scholastic homicides in more agreeable fashion than one might think casually possible. They are only two of a typically youthful cast.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

.Recess. ....

New York, July 19.

Ladies and gentlemen, I bring you glad tidings, news of great gayety. Tomorrow I start on my vacation. This column is the 250th column of the year, five a week for 50 weeks. For the next two weeks, I won't have to look at a typewriter or even go near one. That is my reward. Your reward is that for two weeks you won't have to read 'em. The psychology of the thing, of course, from my standpoint, is that after a few days you will start screaming: "We want Sullivan." Often as not, this backfires. Last year, the customers crossed me up by screaming: "We want Sullivan—to stay away for two more weeks.

* * * *

So long as this column really marks a milestone, the conclusion of a year's work, I'm going to let down my hair. This used to be quite a process but my hair is getting thinner. Just between the two of us, I've never taken a vacation without becoming deadly bored with it. After about six days of enforced idleness, a writer gets jittery if he can't get to a typewriter. At the moment, I'm glad to get away because you do go stale. Right now, I could look happily forward to a month's vacation. But six days from now, the freedom that looks so precious will be a pain in the neck. A columnist away from a typewriter is as dejected as a kibitzer barred from a card game.

* * * *

The first week of my vacation will be spent in Chicago. I don't think I'll see much of it, because I'm booked for a week of vaudeville at the RKO Palace Theater. I do not want you to think that I am like George Jessel's aunt. You will recall that, annually, Jessel's aunt goes into the loge section of the Capitol and stays there for two weeks. He has an uncle who spends his two-week vacation standing directly in front of the air-cooled Paramount, the uncle claiming that the frigid gusts that sweep out the sidewalk every time a customer opens the swinging doors are more invigorating than the salt breezes at Coney Island. No, my friends, I am playing one week in vaudeville in order to get enough money to pay the income tax on the money I earned last year in vaudeville. Next year I will play some more vaudeville to pay the tax on the money I will get at Chicago. It is an endless chain process.

* * * *

There is quite an array of Broadway 'tes traveling west with me. Let's see, Betty Jane Cooper and the Lathrop brothers, that's three—Dixie Dunbar, Tito Coral, Joan Abbott, the Stanley sisters—that's eight—Dave Vine, Peg Leg Bates, 10 in all. These vaudeville people are the most interesting of all troupers of the stage. They'll report at 8 a. m. at the theater on Friday. Stagehands will be erecting the Broadway night club set in which the act is laid. In the pit will be Danny Russo's band, in shirt-sleeves. The performers will each give his or her particular music to the leader, who will distribute the copies to his men.

In 10 minutes the act will have had its music rehearsal. How the band ever remembers all the various tricks of orchestration, I'll never know, but when the show goes on at 12 o'clock or 12:30 noon, it will be pretty nearly letter perfect.

* * * *

The first show of the first day is merely the week's framework. Immediately after the finale, Frank Smith, the manager, will call a meeting in his office. Each act has been clocked exactly. Two minutes will be subtracted from one act, 3 minutes from another, a singer will be requested to change his second number for a livelier tempo, or if he's a big hit, he may be asked to add another song. An act that is not clicking in one position may be switched to another spot to gain momentum. By the time the second show goes on, the whole thing will have tightened up magically. By the end of the day, which calls for four shows, the vaudevillians will give you the impression that they've played together for seasons.

* * * *

I think that vaudeville performers top all others because of this facility to fit themselves quickly into new surroundings, and because the art of vaudeville demands that a performer do something well—and do it fast. The vaudeville man has a limited time in which to click. Every second is valuable. You can always single out a vaudeville star in a dramatic show. The minute Herb Williams made his entrance in "The Farmer Takes a Wife," he got a yell from the audience by a funny little bit of "business." W. C. Fields, Walter Huston, Joe E. Brown trained in vaudeville. They couldn't miss being successful in any other line of stage work. They had learned the value of a quick attack and that, after all, is pace, which is all-important.

* * * *

So, though the first week of my vacation will be spent in a Chicago theater, don't feel badly for me. I'll really enjoy it. There is an undeniable fascination to the stage and its people. This crowd with me are experts in entertainment, yet each one has a different formula and I like to study 'em in action. Each audience is different and that's interesting. And the little man who pays off, he's interesting too! So long!

AMUSEMENTS

Kennedy Checks Nats With Five Hits, Chisox Winning, 7-2

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

THIS appears to be the proper time to reiterate that the Tigers figure to win the American League pennant again. It was a discreet silence on that subject that this department had maintained since hauling off with the prediction last April 15 that Detroit possessed the best ball team in the league. For the best part of three months the Tigers had been making a sucker out of me by lolling about in the nether regions of the first division.

POVICH

But this morning they are only half a game behind the Yanks, going strong while the Yankees are receding. Two straight beatings by the St. Louis Browns have contributed nothing to the Yankees' chances. In fact, those two games may be the tip-off that the Yankees don't have what it takes to win the pennant this season. With the hot breaths of the oncoming Tigers on their necks, the series with the Browns was no time for the Yankees to give ground.

With the half-way mark in the pennant race passed earlier in the week, the Tigers, apparently, have just begun to fight. Schoolboy Rowe has come along to share the pitching burden with Tommy Bridges and Alvin Crowder, whose efforts alone had buoyed the Tigers during the first half of the season. They were always a hitting club, but Rowe's early-season collapse had anchored them far below the lead.

With their present pitching staff, the same infield that brought them the 1934 pennant, and an outfield that is hitting high above its 1934 average, the Tigers are a far-better-balanced outfit than the Yanks—and therein lies the percentage in favor of Detroit as the two clubs enter the home stretch of the race.

BY this time it is fairly apparent that the Yankees banked too heavily on Lefty Gomez. With a record of nine victories and nine defeats, Gomez is encountering his worst season since he became a regular for the Yanks. His inability to win consistently has deprived the Yankees of the trump card they had at their command in former seasons. When a game was needed, Gomez was always handy, but this year he is a distinct liability.

And it is easy to be misled by the sensational average of young Vito Tamulis, who boasts of seven victories against only two defeats. His average is not a true index to his effectiveness. After a streak of successes early in the season, Tamulis has been unable to win consistently despite his average. On two occasions the Nats have knocked him from the box in the early innings and other Yankee pitchers were blamed for the defeat, and in other cases he has gotten out from under losses in a similar manner.

And hand in hand with Gomez's disappointment is the comparatively poor season of Lou Gehrig. Despite his .322 average at bat, Gehrig is not producing the runs he did in other seasons. In striking contrast to the 56 runs Gehrig has driven in this year are the 110 tallies driven across the plate by Hank Greenberg, the Tigers' first baseman.

Neither is the left side of the Yankee's infield bearing up well. At third base, young Red Rolfe is hitting only .258 and Shortstop Frank Crosetti has the anemic average of .254. For the present status at the top of the league the Yankees can thank the come-back of Pitcher Johnny Allen, who can show nine victories against three defeats.

In Short.

Washington's 1936 outfield may be comprised of Dee Miles in right, Jake Powell in center and Bob Loane in left . . . Loane was recently purchased by Chattanooga from Council Bluffs, of the Western League, and according to Manager Clyde Milan will be ready for the majors next season . . . Buddy Myer contemplates the amputation of a deformed toe on his right foot before the 1936 season starts if surgeons cannot relieve the soreness . . . Pitcher Vernon Kennedy and Outfielder Radcliffe, now starring for the Sox, were passed up by Connie Mack after a trial two years ago . . . no player now active in the big leagues saw service in the World War . . . there may be no sentiment in baseball, but Clark Griffith has volunteered any amount needed to put the Walter Johnson Day fund over the top . . . Right Fielder Johnny Stone is not loafing on ground balls hit to his territory . . . the speed of Jake Powell in center field simply makes Stone look bad by comparison . . . in a poll of Southern Association managers, Buddy Lewis, of Chattanooga, was voted the best third baseman in the circuit . . . unanimously . . . the Russian Ambassador and Mrs. Troyanovsky and their son, Oleg, with Vladimir Alexandrovich Burzin, military attache, saw the Nats play yesterday from a box on the first base line . . . they were interested in Ed Remorenko, the only Russian in baseball, who is now playing first base on the Nats' farm at Chattanooga . . . Son Oleg was the recipient of a baseball autographed by Clark Griffith and Bucky Harris.

Mary Hoerger Is Graceful And Unspoiled Diving Champ

By Paul Gallico,

A Special Correspondent.

ORIENTAL POOL, Manhattan Beach, N. Y., July 19.—A party was talking to another party this afternoon at the pool side here and the first party said to the second party—"Do you see that little tow-headed girl standing over there, the skinny little one in the green bathing suit?" The second party said—"Do you mean the infant, that 11-year-old?" The first party said: "Yes, that one. Well, that's the national 10-foot springboard diving champion of the United States of America." The second party gave the first party a look and said: "Thanks pal. And I suppose that 6-year-old boy she's standing with is the heavyweight champion of the world? Go away, will you * * *"

It does seem rather incredible at that to have Mary Hoerger the national diving champion, but there it is. She isn't particularly swelled up about it, but the autograph pests drive her nuts. She has already learned grace, and signs—"Mary Hoerger, Miami Beach," in a careful methodical scrawl.

Celebrity at 11.

I get a big kick out of grown-ups solemnly thrusting autograph books and scraps of paper in front of this most youthful of all national champions ever, and eagerly standing by as she gets a grip on her tongue with her teeth and scrawls her immortal signature. Imagine, being a celebrity at 11. And what will she be at 21? I asked her what she intended to be when she grew up and she said she didn't know. I asked her whether she was tired of diving yet and she said she was not. I then asked her whether she would care to purchase a duck, and she said no, that she had had a duck, but that she had to get rid of it because it insisted upon diving into the pool after her while she was practicing.

She is a quite unspoiled child. Her mother must be doing a pretty good job on her. She is certainly more gracious about autographing and posing for photographers than many older persons. She did some exhibition dives this afternoon and was just as cute as she could be. She has an older sister, Ruth May, who is entered in the platform or high tower dive. Little Mary is likewise entered, but her mother doesn't want her to compete in it. It will be up to Willis Cooling, her coach. Dorothy Poynton Hill, the present

Warneke in Form, Cubs Trim Giants

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 19.—Lean Lonnie Warneke, who beat the Giants almost every time he faced them last season only to have the situation reversed this year, got back into his 1934 form today as he led the Cubs to a 9-to-3 victory over the league leaders.

Warneke hooked up in a hurling duel with Hal Schumacher for the first seven innings and almost single-handed kept Chicago ahead. He gave the Giants only four hits over this span, knocked in the first two runs and scored another to make the score 3-1.

Bolton Garners Single, Double and Triple to No Avail.

Hayes, 2 Relief Hurlers Pounded by Visitors for 13 Blows.

By Shirley Povich.

THE Nats were stricken yesterday by the heat, the humidity and young Vernon Kennedy. Under the combined forces of that trio, with the emphasis on Kennedy, Washington's vaunted batting attack wilted to five hits and the White Sox began to wear out their welcome here with a 7-2 victory.

With Kennedy's sinker ball breaking just above their ankles, the Nats found themselves knee deep in misery with the exception of Cliff Bolton, whose single, double and triple supplied exactly three-fifths of the hits the Washington Club was able to muster against the rookie the White Sox picked up last spring from the last-place Oklahoma City team of the Texas League.

The White Sox were affected by neither the heat, the humidity, nor young Millard Hayes, the Nat's Chattanooga pitching graduate. Fresh from a victory over the St. Louis Browns in his big league debut, Hayes discovered that the White Sox are quite another ball club.

Hayes Bears Brunt.

Young Hayes was subjected to the brunt of the 13-hit offensive the Sox unloosed against three Washington pitchers. He was forced to depart the scene in the seventh inning when the White Sox were in the process of building up a 6-1 lead.

Washington's relief pitchers were no relief to Washington. The Sox saluted Jack Russell with a hit that drove in their sixth run, and after Leon Pettit jauntily strode to the box to take up the pitching in the ninth, Zeke Bonura greeted him with his eighteenth home run of the season.

In six of the nine innings the Sox scored. They stepped away to a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Simmons doubled, took third on a wild pitch and scored on Dykes' fly to center, and in the fourth it was 2-0 when Appling, who had walked, ankled home on Dykes' double that hit the left-field foul line, and a fly by Sewell to right field.

Nats Score in Fourth.

Washington got a run in the fourth when Stone drew a walk and scored, ultimately, while Appling was in the process of robbing Travis of a hit and turning it into a force play at second. But Radcliffe led off the fifth with a triple over Powell's head to boost the score to 3-1, Simmons and Appling contributed hits that made it 4-1 in the sixth, and Piet, Bonura, Simmons and Appling contributed singles toward a two-run uprising in the seventh, the last blow occuring against Russell.

The Nats couldn't score in the fifth despite Bolton's long triple to center with none out. He was wiped off base when Hayes lined to Appling, who threw to third for a double play.

It required a triple against the right field wall by Manush and an infield out by Travis to get the Nats a run in the seventh, but thereafter they found Kennedy in complete command. Only six hitters faced the Chicago rookie in the last two innings.

Joe Kuhel, one of the five Washington regulars who went hitless, can blame Second Baseman Tony Piet. Up four times, Kuhel grounded to Piet four times, and four times was thrown out at first base.

Dodgers Win, Snap Card Streak at 14

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 19.—The longest winning streak of the current major league season came to an end today as the Cardinals took a 3-to-0 whitewashing from Brooklyn and Johnny Babich after winning 14 games in succession. The defeat left the Cards still four games behind the league-leading New York Giants.

Babich allowed the heavy-hitting Cards only five hits and struck out eight in a brilliant performance. Jim Collins was the only Cardinal to get two blows and the only one to reach third base.

Tigers Win, 9-7, Slice Lead to Half Game

Score Over Red Sox in Wild Contest; Near Yanks in League Race.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 19.—Charley Gehringer's triple with the bases full in the sixth inning climaxed a three-run rally that enabled Detroit to gain a 9-7 victory over the Boston Red Sox today. Their triumph placed the Tigers only half a game behind the league-leading New York Yankees.

The score was tied at 2-all and Fritz Ostermueller was waging a keen pitching duel with Tommy Bridges until that fatal frame, when the Tigers batted around and totaled four walks and three hits, including Gehringer's smash.

Ostermueller gave way to Wilson after hurling his second wild pitch which, like the first one, enabled a Tiger to score. Before the two-and-a-half-hour game ended, just as a heavy thunderstorm broke, Manager Joe Cronin was forced to send in two more pitchers.

Bridges Also Routed.

Bridges also left the game in the sixth, after Miller, Rick Ferrell and Werber singled with none out. Elon Hogsett finished the inning, during which the home team scored three runs, and lasted until the eighth, when he was relieved by Alden Auker.

The third Detroit pitcher issued three consecutive passes to fill the bases with two out in the ninth and Manager Mickey Cochrane rushed in Schoolboy Rowe, who beat the Sox yesterday, to save the game.

Rowe had to face Ossie Melillo, who led the Boston attack with three singles and a double, a quartet of hits that drove in three Boston runs, and he made him hit into a force play to end the game.

Yankees Bow To Browns Again, 7-6

Gomez Is Routed in Third; Deshong, Wild, Lets in Winning Marker.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The last-place Browns took another cut at the Yankees' lead today, setting them down for the second straight time, 7 to 6, after tossing away a chance to win by a wider margin. The defeat left the Yanks only a half game ahead of the Detroit Tigers, who trimmed Boston.

Rogers Hornsby's men jumped on Lefty Gomez in the first two innings to score five runs and nicked Walter Brown for another in the third to make it 6-1. The Yanks came back with a rally in the fifth to even the count as Lou Gehrig's fifteenth homer completed a five-run rally.

Brown weakened again in the eighth and was lifted with runners on first and third and Jimmy Deshong let go a wild pitch that allowed Lyn Lary to score the winning run. In addition to the wild heave, four Yankee hurlers gave out 11 passes.

Sox Face Whitehill, Hadley in 2 Games

Veterans Will Try to Win Twin Bill From Chicago.

Rookie Millard Hayes having failed, Manager Bucky Harris today will send two veterans to the mound against the White Sox in an attempt to win both games of the double-header with the third-place Chicago club. Earl Whitehill will pitch the first game and Irving Hadley the second.

In one of the games the Nats are expected to face Ted Lyons, now in the process of a sensational comeback with the White Sox, after a four-year lapse from his peak pitching form.

Harris also is ready to re-install young Dee Miles in the Nats' outfield. The Chattanooga graduate, who is hitting .417 at the present writing, has virtually recovered from his bruised hand and the Nats' manager is eager to give a thorough test with an eye toward the make-up of the Nats' 1936 outfield.

Horses Settle 3-Year-Old Title Today

Omaha and Black Helen Chief Contenders in $30,000 Race.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 19.—The horse race that undoubtedly will settle the 3-year-old championship of the American turf for 1935 will be decided at Arlington Park tomorrow before a crowd of more than 40,000 spectators.

Omaha, the Eastern champion, and Black Helen, the Western contender, and nine others will go to the post in the seventh renewal of the $30,000 added Arlington Classic stakes to settle the championship issue. If Omaha, winner of the Kentucky Derby, Preakness, Belmont Stakes and Dwyer Stakes, wins, there will be no further doubt as to his claims for the 3-year-old championship. Should Black Helen win, the sensational little brown filly will snatch away the crown which already has been shaped for Omaha.

If Omaha and Black Helen loose, the 3-year-old title will be in a scramble.

Brilliant Records.

Both contenders for the championship will go into the struggle ready to run the races of their careers. The records they rolled up before their meeting in the classic stakes are among the most brilliant in American racing annals. Omaha lost only two races this year, the Withers Mile and the Brooklyn Handicap, the first and only time he has raced against older horses.

Black Helen's greatest triumph this year was winning the $25,000 added American Derby, in which she led from start to finish. She also captured the Florida Derby and the American Coaching Club Oaks. In seven starts, she won six races, losing only to her stable companion, Bloodroot, in an over-

Capital Fans to Pen Tributes To Johnson on Huge Scroll

Tom Doerer, well-known local artist, is preparing a huge testimonial scroll to be placed inside the park where it may be autographed by the fans.

Tastefully done, the scroll will comprise a huge portrait of Johnson on a background of drawings of Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth and other greats of the game.

The Washington Chapter of the Baseball Writers Association of America is sponsoring the tribute to Johnson, who, as manager of the Indians is now under fire by Cleveland newspapermen and fans as a result of the team's slump.

Washington baseball writers are receiving contributions with which to buy Johnson a modest but suitable gift for presentation at the ceremonies at home plate in the park where he won the admiration of a Nation's fandom by his pitching exploits for the Washington club.

Peoples Drug Stores yesterday rallied to the aid of the fund by placing contribution boxes at the cigar counters of each of their stores. Vice President John Nance Garner is expected to make the presentation. The Columbia Broadcasting System will broadcast the ceremonies.

Mangrum Tops St. Paul Golf With a 67

Trio Tied for Second, One Shot in Rear; 12 Snap Par First Day.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, July 19.—Back from an extended honeymoon, Ray Mangrum, of Los Angeles, went back to work again like a good provider today and fired a brilliant 67 to beat a par-shelling trio by one shot in the first round of the $5,000 St. Paul Open golf championship.

As a broiling sun wilted the field and sent the mercury above 100 in the lowland regions of the championship Keller course, the bridegroom of the recent National Open at Oakmont strode forth with a blazing hot putter to smash par by five blows. It was just enough to give him a lead over "Lighthorse" Harry Cooper, of Chicago, leading money winner of the show over five years; Frank Walsh, of Chicago, and Bill Kaiser, of Louisville, Ky., who came in later with a refreshing breeze to post 68s.

165 Golfers Compete.

Given a perfectly conditioned course to work on, the record-sized field of 165 starters leveled such an assault that par was smashed by 12 players with scores ranging from Mangrum's 67 to 71, despite the furnace-like heat. Ky Laffoon, of Chicago, loser with Cooper in the triple play-off for the title last year to Johnny Revolta, of Milwaukee, finished right behind the leaders with a 69.

Another quartet—Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., leading money winner of the year; Bunny Torpey, Kansas City star; Gene Kunes, Philadelphia, and Pat Sawyer, Minneapolis amateur—who gave the home town folks a thrill by leading the field for an hour, was tied with 70's. Three more Chicago stars, Tom Armour, Horton Smith and Eddie Loos, also were only a few putts away with 71's.

Revolta, Hagen Card 73's.

Revolta didn't do so well, comparatively speaking, scoring "only" 73, the same total posted by Walter Hagen, who had Richard Arlen of movie fame playing with him before the largest gallery of the day. Arlen was off his usual form but scored an 85 with two disastrous sevens dotting his card.

From the standpoint of golfing excellence, Walsh shot one of the finest rounds ever put together by man today, but he couldn't match the putting spree staged by Mangrum. Over the 18 greens, Mangrum putted only 26 times, whereas Walsh needed 33 putts and failed to sink one over six feet.

So closely bunched was the field that 26 were separated by only six strokes with 54 more holes to be played before Sunday night. Sam Parks, jr., of Pittsburgh, National Open champion, played well with a 35-38—73, a mark that was tied by a dozen players, among them Toichro Toda, Jack Yasuda and Seisui Chinn, of the touring Japanese professional team. Tied at 72 were Byron Nelson, Ridgewood, N. J.; Sam Belfore, Duluth, Minn., and Denny Shute, of Chicago, former British Open champion; Ralph Stonehouse, Indianapolis, and Leo Diegel, Philadelphia.

Bliss, Yates Set Pace in Western

Edwards Trims Emery, Gaines Downs Malloy; Gain Semi-finals.

By the Associated Press.

COLORADO SPRINGS, July 19. Rodney Bliss, of Omaha, the medalist, led the way into the semifinals of the Western amateur golf tournament here today by a decisive 9-and-8 triumph over Dave Goldman, of Dallas, second-round conqueror of Johnny Goodman, Bliss' fellow townsman.

Three youngsters and a veteran were left in the battle for the title shorn yesterday from Zell Eaton. Besides Bliss, who is 22, the survivors are Charley Yates, of Atlanta, 21; Don Edwards, 20, Stanford University student, from San Jose, Calif., and Jack Gaines, former California champion from Los Angeles.

Is Three Under Par.

Bliss provided the sensation of the quarter-finals with three under par golf that ousted Goldman, freckled Texan who was runner-up last year in both the Western and national amateur tournaments.

Moreland was one down after the first 18 holes with a medal score of 72, including three straight birdies on the outgoing nine, one of them good for only a half.

The former Texas was over par in only one hole in the afternoon, shot a birdie and had a 69, but the blond youngster from Georgia had him in hand.

Takes 2-Up Lead.

Moreland wiped away Yates' advantage on the third nine, winning the twentieth, where he had an eagle 3, and took the twenty-second and twenty-third to go 2 up.

He remained 2 up through the afternoon turn.

Phildia, 3-1 Shot, Wins by Length in Suffolk Downs Feature

Genteel Lady Is Beaten in Stretch

Favored Bedight Shows Early Speed, Fades When Pressed.

By the Associated Press.

SUFFOLK DOWNS, Boston, July 19.—Curtis King's Phildia, second choice in the betting at 3-1, scored in the Berkshire, the five furlong feature of the day, over Genteel Lady by a length. The gelded son of Phillip and Diana got away from the gate slowly but improved at each post, going into the lead in the final sixteenth.

The favored Bedight showed early speed but faded badly when the run down the back stretch grew hot. Genteel Lady went to the top at this spot and held command until displaced by the winner's rush. Marmara, which was third, was well placed in the early running but trailed Genteel Lady by two lengths at the wire. Legender got away well but was out of the contention early, while Light Brook, poorly placed, never threatened.

Chance Ray Triumphs.

By the Associated Press.

Empire City, July 19.—The Concord Purse, a dash over the short six furlongs distance, headed an otherwise drab program here today and a thrilling finish saw Mrs. W. Plunket Stewart's Chance Ray getting up just in time to win by a nose from H. Teller Archibald's Candy Maid. The Geneseo Stable's Patriotic was third, a length and a half behind and four lengths before H. C. McGehee's Bright Phantom, the only other starter.

Patriotic ruled favorite at 7 to 5. Chance Ray closed at 2 to 1 and Candy Maid at 11 to 5, while Bright Phantom was the extreme outsider at 20 to 1. Bobby Merritt rode a perfect race astride Chance Ray, which made the unimpressive time of 1:09 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIEUT. GREENOCK, $6.00, $3.60, $2.40; GAY EDWARD, $5.00, $3.40; MOTTLED, $3.00.

LIEUT. GREENOCK moved around on the outside to gain the command rounding the far turn, drew clear and was kept under pressure through the stretch to hold GAY EDWARD safe. The latter moved up steadily, came through on the inside at the stretch turn and was gaining on the winner rapidly at the end. MOTTLED moved up threateningly after rounding from the back stretch, but was unable to improve his position in the final drive. PAUL JUNIOR closed a big gap through the last quarter-mile.

SECOND RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:55. Off at 2:56½. Winner, Mrs. Floyd West's b. f. (4), by Manister Tor—Granada. Trained by E. Haughton. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:13, 1:41, 1:47 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PAPER PROFITS, $7.40, $4.20, $3.40; HAPPY EASTER, $6.40, $4.40; GIFTED LADY, $4.60.

PAPER PROFITS, taken back of the pace, moved around on the outside, came gamely in the stretch to wear down GIFTED LADY for the command, but barely lasted to hold the closing bid of HAPPY EASTER. The latter, restrained early, came to the outside of the leaders in the stretch and, closing with a rush, would probably have been the winner in another stride. GIFTED LADY took command in the run to the first turn, was rated along under slight restraint, fought it out courageously through the stretch and just failed to stave off the bids of the first two. PREFER forced the early pace, but weakened in the last three-sixteenths.

THIRD RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-old colts and geldings. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:33. Off at 3:35. Winner, Leo J. Marks' br. g. (2), by Misstep—Culture. Trained by H. Hart. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $250. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:46 4-5, 1:01.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANNERLY, $51.40, $19.20, $9.40; SKOTCHY, $7.00, $5.40; SIGHTING BAR, $7.80.

MANNERLY worked his way up gradually on the outside, closed with good energy through the stretch, and was up in the last few strides to wear down SKOTCHY. The latter went to the front at once, drew clear after rounding the far turn and, holding on gamely through the stretch, was unable to withstand the bid of the winner. SIGHTING BAR was prominently placed the entire way. SAN RAFAEL, away last, was unable to keep pace though closing in determined fashion in the stretch run.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:10. Off at 4:10. Winner, Mrs. A. M. Creech's ch. m. (6), by Sweep On—Calico. Trained by D. McAuliffe. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:14 4-5, 1:41, 1:48 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SOCIAL CLIMBER, $5.00, $3.20, $2.60; JERRY S., $6.20, $4.20; HICKORY LAD, $4.40.

SOCIAL CLIMBER, prominently placed while kept within striking distance of the pace, went to the front when called upon but swerved when placed under punishment at the furlong pole, ducked to the rail and, hard ridden the remainder of the way, held JERRY S. safe. The latter improved his position steadily in the last half-mile and closed determinedly through the stretch. HICKORY LAD, under urging all the way, closed gamely in the stretch run. GODFIN trailed for most of the way and was unable to reach the leaders. HELEN BAB, much used in forcing the pace, tired in the last three furlongs.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:41. Off at 4:49½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHILDIA, $8.60, $4.40, $4.00; GENTEEL LADY, $8.60, $4.80; MARMARA, $5.20.

PHILDIA, under steadying restraint while following within striking distance of the leaders, came around on the outside in the stretch, closed stoutly and, wearing down GENTEEL LADY, drew clear at the end. GENTEEL LADY showed good speed from the start, was much used in disputing of BEDIGHT and was unable to stave off the gaining challenge of the winner. MARMARA moved up on the outside after leaving the back stretch and closed with good energy. LEGENDER was unable to enter into serious contention. BEDIGHT had early speed, but was unable to outrun GENTEEL LADY and faltered through the stretch.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:10. Off at 5:20. Winner, Mrs. E. Haughton's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOLD LOVER, $7.60, $4.20, $3.40; PALMA, $10.00, $6.00; HARDWARE, $5.00.

BOLD LOVER, moved up on the outside down the back stretch, took command nearing the half-mile ground, was steadied along, swerved in the stretch and held PALMA safe at the end. PALMA, restrained early, moved up gamely when called upon, and fought it out with good energy to the end. HARDWARE, on the inside and well placed throughout, attempted to come between the leaders at the furlong pole but was forced to go to the inside and finished determinedly. SAFE AND SOUND closed some ground though unable to enter into serious contention.

FOUR SPOT, prominently placed all the way, wore down the leaders leaving the back stretch and, withstanding determined opposition from FAIRY STREET, outlasted the latter at the end. FAIRY STREET moved around on the outside and closed with good energy through the last quarter-mile. GREY GLADE had speed from the start, dropped back after going the first five-sixteenths, moved up again on the inside, and closed with good courage though unable to reach the leading pair. SANDWRACK closed some ground.

Clang Equals World Record at Arlington

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 19.—Clang, racing for J. F. Clark, jr., and ridden by Jockey Don Meade, equaled the world's record for 7-furlongs at Arlington Park today when the 3-year-old son of Stimulus—Chicksaw ran the distance in 1:22.

Roseben held the record when he turned in the same time at Belmont Park in 1906, carrying 126 pounds. Clang carried 105 pounds. Fractional time of Clang's remarkable performance was 0:22 3-5, 0:45 3-5, 1:09 3-5 and 1:22. The winner was never extended, winning all by himself by six lengths.

C. V. Whitney's Pantoufle, ridden by A. Gray, sensational apprentice from California, scored an upset victory in the Geneva Purse at 1 mile.

The Shandon Farm's Dust Girl finished third. Pantoufle, which paid $75.60, ran the distance in 1:35 4-5.

Skeet Aces From 20 States Open North-South Shoot Today

200 Entries Are Posted For Event

FROM Boston to Atlanta, the keenest-eyed men, women and children marksmen of their respective localities have come to Washington to match their skill against one another for the various championships which form the lure of the North-South skeet shoot opening this afternoon at the National Capital Skeet Club in Montgomery County, Md.

Close to 200 entries from close to 20 States are planning to battle it out in the sport which tests whether one man is superior to another in hitting clay pigeons traveling in any given direction at 90 miles an hour.

Champions by the dozen were in the city or arriving here last night, many practicing at the scene of action for a lengthy period yesterday.

Boy, 12, Is Entered.

Perhaps the most unusual competitor in the entire list of events will be Washington's 12-year-old Larry Williams, the favorite to win the junior event of 50 targets, which starts at 2 o'clock. Son of the president of the National Capital Skeet Club, Lawrence Williams, young Larry is regarded today as one of the foremost juvenile marksmen in the country. His success in nailing 98 in 100 pigeons in the New York State open this year stamped him an indelible place in skeet-shooting annals.

Enough women's champions to assure a queenly bit of warfare in the women's open will begin competition in that event, also at 2 o'clock. Throughout the afternoon the women will bang it out for the championship, which appears to lie among the national champion, Anna Vance, of Boston; Winifred Haley, Connecticut champion; Abbie Ingalls, of Hot Springs, Va., champion of Virginia, and the local club's own Mrs. William C. Coe, Maryland champion.

Champion Is Favored.

The sporty 410-gauge shoot for men opens later in the afternoon. Using the little guns which so recently have gained great popularity, the field will begin action with Dr. Robert C. Vance, of Boston, the defending champion, favored to repeat, and Charles Gillet, of Baltimore, runner-up last year, and President Williams, of the Washington club, figuring to provide the champion with the closest competition.

At 4:30 o'clock the 20-gauge championships, involving what is known as the field gun, such as a man would normally use on upland birds, will attract a large portion of the men's field.

New Records Seen.

The real record-breaking, however, is not expected until tomorrow, when the individual and team championships are in order. New records are "as sure as shooting," experts declare, with such a team as the Roseland (N. J.) marksmen in action. This team shot 492 out of a possible 500 recently against the Santa Monica (Calif.) sharpshooters, Dr. C. W. Scranton, F. R. Kelly and F. G. Traeger shooting a 99 apiece.

Other teams particularly threatening are Baltimore, Richmond, Staunton, Nassau Gun Club of Long Island, Middlefield (Conn.), Harrisburg, and Lawrenceville, Va., and the local National Capital Club. Shooting for the home team will be W. C. Coe, Gen. Billy Mitchell (figured to finish high in the individual scoring), Whitney Leary, George Deyoe and Williams.

Charles Gillet, of Baltimore, who shot a perfect score a few weeks ago, is the dark horse in the Maryland State championships, although Dave Sklar, of Brooklyn, champion of New York State and member of the first all-American team; Jack Howard, of Richmond, and Bob Nichols, gun editor of the magazine Field and Stream, are expected to provide stern opposition.

The Atlantan planted his tee shot on the thirty-first, 2 feet from the cup, for a birdie deuce that squared it up and went 1 up when Moreland took a six on the next hole.

Five feet away with his approach on the thirty-third, Yates sank the putt for another birdie. Moreland came back with a birdie 2 on the thirty-fourth, and they halved the rest of the way in.

Yates laid his iron second 6 feet above the pin on the home green and Moreland overshot. Moreland's first putt was wide and Yates took two to get down safely.

Field Trials Are Set For Springer Spaniels

Richmond, Va., July 19 (AP).—The first Springer Spaniel field trials ever staged in Virginia will be held at Hot Springs, October 4 and 5, game commission officials said here today.

Mack Hart, executive secretary of the commission, described the Springer Spaniels as "great retrievers," and said they are in effect "miniature Setters." They are used in cover shooting, he said, and are particularly adept at hunting out birds in low places.

Commissioners Settle Promoters' Date War

WITHOUT resorting to fisticuffs or the use of firearms, which at first glance appeared extremely probable, the District boxing commissioners yesterday ironed out the promoting problems of gnarled-ear Joe Turner and rotund Howard Livingston, the reformed referee who now promotes boxing and wrestling for the American Legion and allegedly for a profit.

Discussion of the allotment of dates for the rival concerns brought to light the interesting information that Joe Savoldi, who holds the long-distance drop-kicking record in wrestling, will meet Danno O'Mahoney, the new champeen, Tuesday, August 6, at Griffith Stadium.

Danno's presence in the ball park Tuesday night led Livingston and his confreres to accept Thursday as the night of their next two shows scheduled August 1 and 8. This will give the fans two days to forget the young Irisher and think more about the Legion boxing.

After that their shows will be presented Wednesdays. The Legion Arena will be dark next week and Griffith Stadium will see no night action in the two weeks following.

Livington also received permission to hold future rassles in the Northeast spot on Saturdays, thereby completely clearing up the date conflicts which have featured the local war.

Turner was granted permission to continue with his boxing shows on Mondays, inasmuch as he has cards tentatively arranged for the next four weeks. The crusty old mat artist also has his eye on the O'Mahoney-Savoldi match, which is the plum expected to pay off the deficit accumulated by other members of the thundering herd.

To this end he has canceled wrestling for Thursday, August 1. This move serves the double purpose of whetting the customers' appetite for the big brawl and gives the Legion clear sailing on boxing seas that week.

An application for permission to stage a bout between John Henry Lewis, well known Negro light heavyweight, and Umberto Arcie was filed by the Lincoln Athletic Club. The bout would be held on July 31. The commission intimated it would consent to the match if and when properly signed contracts of the fighters are submitted for its approval.

Greenbrier's Poloists Beat Army Four

Take Early Lead and Go On to Win, 8-2; Rand Is Leader in Attack.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., July 19.—The War Department polo team from Washington went down to defeat this afternoon on the Greenbrier field before the Greenbriers, 8 to 2. Greenbrier was awarded a 2-goal handicap, but as it turned out this advantage was not needed.

William B. Rand, of Yale, at No. 1 for the local outfit, was the spearhead of a furious attack which started in the first period when he tallied the initial counter on a short shot in front of the Army goal. Army scored its first goal in the same chukker when Maj. Horace McBride drove through on a long forehand late in the period. The green and white clad quartet, led by Rand, came through for two goals in the second period and one in the third to lead its opponents, 4 to 1. Both teams went scoreless in the fourth, but in the fifth the collegians countered twice to the Army's once, Rand and Secor coming through with two beautiful shots.

Well-Played Throughout.

The game was well played throughout, with Lieut. Col. Devers of the Army forces, Rand and Secor of the Greenbrier quartet standing out. Jay Secor, 1935 captain of the intercollegiate championship Yale team, was a bright individual star.

Another game between the same teams will be played at 3 p. m., Sunday on the Greenbrier field.

Confident Cup Team Faces Germany

Americans Favored to Meet Britain in Challenge Round Next Week.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 19.—For the eighth time since the tennis musketeers of France claimed the Davis cup at Germantown, Pa., in 1927, America's Cup representatives rested their racquets tonight only two deep trenches removed from their ultimate goal—regaining the emblem of world tennis supremacy.

Led by Donald Budge, violently red-headed youngster from the Pacific Coast, the Americans will open three days of hostilities against Germany's crack forces on the No. 1 court at Wimbledon at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow (8:30 Eastern standard time).

Surviving that obstacle, as they are strongly favored to do, they reach another challenge round the following week-end against the British, who have held the bulky trophy for two years.

Allison Faces Von Cramm.

Two singles encounters are on the first day's program. In the first, Budge, who has skyrocketed to tennis fame during his month abroad, meets young Heiner Henkel, weaker member of the German singles duo. Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., faces the German ace, Baron Gottfried von Cramm, in the other.

Doubles will be played Monday, with Budge and Allison changing opponents in the two final matches Tuesday.

John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, the team's doubles specialist, who was almost overlooked in the excitement attending Budge's sensational play, but who is counted on to help give the Americans a certain point against Germany, limbered up briskly with Gene Mako, of Los Angeles.

The American players received with undisguised glee news of successive setbacks given Fred Perry, British singles ace, and the British doubles team of G. P. Hughes and C. R. D. Tuckey at Eastbourne yesterday and today.

Ellinger, Lacrosse Ace, Is Wed Secretly

The secret marriage of Charles Ellinger, Baltimore, sophomore all-American lacrosse star of the University of Maryland, to Miss June Winters, of Beverly Hills, Calif., was announced yesterday. Miss Winters is a sophomore co-ed at the University of Southern California. The ceremony took place July 9.

Ellinger, said to be the best lacrosse player in the country last season, was touring Western Canada with the National Collegiate lacrosse team, playing a series of exhibition games. He took a hurried trip to the home of Miss Winters in California, where he was married.

Frisch Gives His Job to Youth, But Won't Retire Yet, He Says

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, July 19.—Frankie Frisch, veteran of nearly two decades of brilliant second baseman ship, has thumbed himself to the dugout in favor of a youthful whirling dervish named Burgess Whitehead, but the "Fordham Flash" has no intention of counting himself out as a regular.

"I'm good for at least two more years as a regular," said the indignant manager of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals today, while his youthful farmhand, Whitehead, ruled at ease over the midway station where Frisch was king for 16 years.

Whitehead came up quietly last year from a Cardinal farm at Columbus in the American Association; just as quietly he overthrew Frisch's regime at second base this season with almost airtight defensive work and a hitting average near the .300 mark. Yesterday he got four hits out of five attempts, and scored four runs.

It is a story of "legs and the man" that has seen the veteran of eight world series campaigns retire himself in facor of a youngster. Frisch has been having trouble with his legs all summer and frankly admitted recently that they couldn't stand the gaff, unless he could find some means to limber them up.

But the Fordham scholar has behind him a baseball career that has seen his average always above .300 and at times soar to .400. One of the greatest money players of all times, he gave support to his boast of two more seasons one day this week by stepping up as a pinch hitter and stealing a game from Boston with a timely double.

Leech Cup Goal Of Service Net Play Here

IF IT isn't football, it's tennis.

The heated sports rivalry, which always has existed between the Army and the Navy will be renewed this afternoon at the Army-Navy Country Club with the creame of the Service netmen battling it out for the Leech Cup. Excepting last year and the year before, the trophy has been in competition ever since 1924.

Navy, seven times winner, will be represented in the singles by Lieut. John J. McCue, of Annapolis; Lieut. Richard M. Watt, jr., of New York; Lieut. Charles H. Lyman, of Annapolis, and Ensign Jesse B. Gay, of Annapolis. In the doubles the following order will prevail: Lieut. William E. Howard, of Philadelphia, and Lieut. Watt; Lieut. Richard W. Dole, of Annapolis, and Lieut. McCue; Ensign Manning M. Kimmell, of Annapolis and Ensign Gay.

Those to carry the burden for the Army in the singles are Second Lieut. Dolf Muehleisen, of Rockwell Field, Calif.; Maj. R. C. Van Vliet, of Camden, N. J.; First Lieut. L. K. Robinson, of Bolling Field, and First Lieut. D. D. Hedekin, of Fort McPherson, Ga. Paired in the team competition will be First Lieut. J. T. Helms, of March Field, Calif., and Second Lieut. Muehleisen; Second Lieut. H. B. Thatcher, of Fort Meade, and First Lieut. Hedekin; Second Lieut. E. M. O'Connell, of Fort Jay, N. Y., and First Lieut. Robinson.

Both squads have been practicing for weeks in preparation for the matches, the Army at the Club and the Navy at the Naval Academy. Maj. Van Vliet recently won the all-Army championship at West Point. Navy, in pointing for the matches, has drafted the two aces of the 1935 Naval Academy team, Ensign Gay and Ensign Kimmell.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

EASTON, Md., July 19.—The first two week-ends of next month will bring two annual large-scale sailing and power boat regattas on the Eastern Shore of the bay. On August 8, 9 and 10, the Miles River Yacht Club of St. Michaels will hold its annual event on the Miles River and Eastern Bay and on August 16, 17 and 18 the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Club of Easton is slated to hold its forty-third annual regatta.

The Miles River event will consist of sailing and power boat races, the former to be run over a course below Herring Island for the large boats, with the shollwer-draft boats competing on the river off St. Michaels. Races, both sail and power, start at 10 a. m. Friday and Saturday, continuing until 4 p. m. The program includes the race for the Governor's Cup by Chesapeake Bay log sailing canoes, free-for-all sailing championship, and the handicap free-for all. The course for the power boats is 2½ miles to a lap for two laps, with the outboards running 1 2-3 miles for a lap for three laps.

Trophies Are Offered.

Yachts and canoes will sail for the Lipton Trophy and the J. G. Johnson Memorial Trophy in the Chesapeake regatta over the Tred Avon and Choptack rivers off Oxford. Entries have been received from Hampton, Va., Gibson Island, Elk River, Delaware River, Dilmington, Barnegat Bay and other marine points. The Commodore's Trophy will be the goal for Chesapeake Bay log canoes.

Both the Miles River and Chesapeake clubs have been donated new trophies. Attorney John C. North, of Easton, has presented the former with a perpetual trophy in honor of his grandfather, Commodore William Sydney Covington, famous racing ship builder. The same club is to receive a trophy from members in honor of Capt. John B. Harrison, another famous boat builder of the past.

The Chesapeake club has been given a cup to be known as the Dr. James A. Stevens Memorial, to be raced for annually by 8-meter sloops.

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Scoring her second record-breaking performance in two days, Lenore Kight, of Homestead, Pa., queen of America's free-stylists, today became the star of the National A. A. U. women's swimming and diving championships.

Miss Kight added the 440-yard title to yesterday's win in the mile. In each event she registered new American record time. In each it was her own record that she broke, and in each she was the successful defending champion.

Her 440 today was a beautiful performance. She knew just how fast she wanted to swim at every stage of the race. She was perfectly willing to allow Mary Lou Petty, of Seattle, to set the early pace and to keep the lead for precisely half the distance.

But here the Homestead girl took command, and added distance continually to win going away by fully 20 yards in the new record time of 5:32.5. The old record was 5:33.6.

Miamian Just Misses.

June Barr, of Miami, back with the pack throughout most of the distance, put on a great finishing spurt and just missed nosing out Miss Petty for second, finishing one-tenth of a second behind the Coast star. En route to second place Miss Petty set a new American mark of 2:37.5 for the 220 yards.

Miss Kight was the only one of the defending champions in today's three events to complete a successful defense.

In the 220-yard backstroke Elizabeth Kompa, of New York, dethroned Alice Bridges of Whitinsville, Mass., and in the 220-yard breaststroke, Katherine Rawls, of Miami, ended the reign of Anne Govednik, of Chisholm, Minn.

The 880-yard relay championship and the 300-meter individual medley relay chmapionship are listed for competition tomorrow.

McNeill Won't Defend Clarksburg Golf Title

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 19.—Forrest McNeill, the Clarksburg Country Club's No. 1 golfer and several times State champion, will not defend his title in the club championship tournament which will open early in August. He feels that when he has finished the president's cup tournament he will have had enough competitive golf to last him this year.

Must Square Things.

And speaking of Mrs. Dorothy Poynton Hill, I must square something. Dorothy was very angry with me today because of yesterday's "Baby vs. Wife" piece. But what she was really peeved about was that I wrote that she might be taken for Miss Hoerger's mother. Dorohty is just 22. That would have made her a mother at 11. I pointed out that Miss Hoerger had had a national championship at 11, but I don't think that went so good. I finally explained that I had been wearing my sun glasses at the time. I put on my regular light glasses and am now prepared to state that Mrs. Hill does not look like Miss Hoerger's mother. She does not even look like her aunt. I make this statement, not because I am afraid of Mrs. Hill, because as soon as I said that I would, she took her fingers from my throat and her teeth out of my ear. She also said that she was sorry that she had scratched my face and hoped that it would heal soon. This is all a great lesson to me.

This thing of being an official swimming judge is likewise proving an experience, and one, I suspect which will make me considerably more tolerant of all A. A. U. officials. There was one race, a handicap affair of junior girls at a 100 meters in which apparently seven young ladies slapped the finish board at the same time. It was my duty to select the girl who had finished fourth. I handed Mr. Daniel Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the National A. A. U. and chief judge, a blank slip of paper and said—"My dear Mr. Ferris. It is with the greatest regret that I must inform you that I can not render a decision on this race because I haven't the faintest idea who finished fourth. I also do not know who finished first, second and third." I think maybe tomorrow I will be fired.

I had always thought—and so had you—that anybody could judge a race and pick the places as they finished, and that officials who couldn't or who picked wrong places were dopes. I believe that I will take that back along with the allegations that Mrs. Dorothy Poynton Hill could be Mary Hoerger's mother. When the young ladies are all splashing to the finish in a white foam of water, and some of them touch under water it takes some one very special to tell them apart. And they all look alike in those white swim caps any way. I think Mrs. Dorothy Poynton Hill is young and beautiful and A. A. U. judges damned clever.

One beauty—Eleanor Holm is temporarily out of the back-stroke picture. Two beauties have taken her place. O-o-o-have you seen the Kompa girls, Elisabeth and Erna? They finished one-two in the 220 back-stroke championship today, defeating the defending champion, Alice Bridges. The Kompa girls are both W. S. A. swimmers, and are pretty as a picture and difficult to tell apart. Inside of another year, these two will be cracking records.

Fish Are Plentiful In Nearby Waters

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 19.—Fishermen who expect to spend their week-end on Maryland waters face a bright prospect, Judge Robert F. Duer, head of the State conservation commission, said today after receiving reports from county fishing inspectors.

Almost all the State reported excellent fishing conditions. Sport in the Patuxent River is "slack," but heavy catches are reported in the bay between Annapolis and Solomons Island. There are plenty of small fish in the lower Potomac. The Eastern Shore had good prospects except in the Nanticoke River and around Poplar Island.

Fish are larger and more plentiful in the Potomac River in Frederick County than they have been in 15 years, one inspector reported. Garrett County had the only uncheerful prospect, saying that conditions were only "fairly good." Many rockfish are being caught off Annapolis, with hardheads all through the bay, other reports said.

Supreme Court Of Banking Is Plan of Rogers

By Claude A. Jagger,
Associated Press Financial Editor.

Ithaca, N. Y., July 19.—A supreme court of banking to prevent the next American boom from getting out of hand was urged today by Prof. James Harvey Rogers, prominent Yale economist and recent monetary adviser to President Roosevelt.

Addressing the monetary conference of the annual session of the American Institute of Cooperation, he said he felt that the banking bill now before Congress should "be made much stronger." The members of the Federal Reserve or Banking Control Board, he said, should be endowed with the independence and Prestige of Supreme Court justices, "so they will have the nerve to put the brakes on when the time comes."

Rogers said he had no patience with those who feared immediate inflation from devaluation of the dollar, but asserted that now is the time to take steps to prevent an inflationary boom four or five years from now, which would result in another collapse like 1929.

Dr. Lionel D. Edie, New York economist, told the more than 1,000 representatives of agricultural and marketing co-operatives that stabilization of the dollar with the British pound, on a sort of "trial marriage basis should be undertaken at once to ward off serious international currency disturbances."

Maj. L. L. D. Ancas, English economic writer and author of recent pamphlets forecasting a boom in the United States, pointed out that an important contributing factor to the excesses of the last boom and the resulting collapse was the failure of the banking authorities to prevent excessive lending of short term funds for speculation.

Dr. George F. Warren, who played a prominent role in the Washington gold price changing of 1933, described the old gold standard as inadequate to maintain the democratic form of government in modern society, and asserted that France was risking dictatorship in her struggle to stay on gold. Stability through general adoption of managed currencies, with purchasing power controlled through changes in the price of gold, was the program he urged.

Prof. O. M. W. Sprague, of Harvard, said at the concluding session of the conference, he thought all of the speakers were in agreement that "no further improvement would result from further devaluation of the dollar." He suggested a gradual return to the gold standard and disagreed with Edie that the time was ripe for immediate stabilization of the dollar-pound ratio.

Surety Sales In 1935 at Par

$25,000,000 Contracted For on Every Work Day,

National Life Insurance sales during the first half of 1935 were exactly the same as during the corresponding period of 1934, the Life Insurance Research Bureau in Hartford, Conn., reported last night.

For every working day the American people purchased $25,000,000, of new insurance protection. This sum does not include the enormous amounts that are being invested in annuities.

The year was begun with large increases during January and February, while March and April fell off substantially from the preceding year. During the last two months slight increases have been reported.

Three sections of the country were outstanding in the performance turned in. Both the South Atlantic and the Pacific sections recorded increases of 4 per cent while the Middle Atlantic States averaged an increase of 1 per cent over the first six months of 1934.

A comparison by sections follows for both the past six months and the full year:

Federal Purchases Of Silver Expand

By the United Press.

Mounting world silver purchases by the Federal Government were shown in Department of Commerce figures which yesterday revealed silver imports of $8,336,850 for the week ended July 12. This compared with imports of $5,656,743 in the preceding week and $3,211,205 in the week ended June 28.

$75,000,000 Bonds Affected By Gold Ruling

Total Is Substantially Less Than Previously Estimated.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 19.—Not more than $75,000,000 in bonds in this country will be affected by the Dutch gold guilder decision rendered yesterday by Federal Judge John C. Knox, it was estimated today by Harry Hoffman, attorney, who argued the case. Judge Knox ruled that the St. Louis & Southwestern Railway must pay the gold equivalent of its bond coupons held by the Anglo-Continentale Treuhand A. G.

The plaintiffs, represented by Hoffman, won their contention that the coupons must be paid in guilders, still on a gold basis, rather than in devaluated United States dollars.

"I should be surprised if bonds payable in a fixed number of foreign currency units, such as is the case with these particular St. Louis & Southwestern Railway bonds, would be more than a fraction of the $285,000,000 estimated as might be affected by E. Fountaine Broun, associated with Cravath, De Gersdorff, Swaine & Wood," Hoffman said.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

	Fri.	Thur.
Advances	209	388
Declines	372	233
Unchanged	195	167
Total issues	776	788

Stocks—Profit-taking laid a heavy hand on all sections. Most stocks ended moderately on the minus side, although some specialties and retail stores continued to advance on active demand. Traders saw the reaction as more or less technical. Sales for the session, 1,173,110.

Bonds—Corporates were unsettled by increased offerings of rails and utilities during the final trading and closes were in the main lower. Federals displayed irregularity. Transfers were $9,201,000.

Grains—Stimulated by reports that domestic wheat crops have shrunk since the Government's estimate on July 1, prices averaged higher. July wheat last at 84; July corn, at 83½.

Cotton—Prices were irregularly lower with declines of 4 to 16 points. July last at 11.97.

Sugar—Raw sugar weakened and closed at 3.20. Refined also was easier and final at 4.90.

Coffee—Spot coffee barely was steady. Rio No. 7 closed at 6¾ and Santos No. 4 last at 8.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, July 19.—The flow of investment money into the stock market and the nibbling of speculators at new and attractive bait dwindled a little, and with the fall in volume to not greatly in excess of 1,000,000 shares the price changes were mixed. Favored groups progressed a bit or maintained their positions, but profit taking here and there and an unwillingness to lift bids weakened other sections. Bonds were firm. September wheat closed ⅜ of a cent higher at 84⅝ cents a bushel.

Plenty of money is around for investment in securities on which earnings and prospect reports are favorable. Some market sections, as the oils, sugars and utilities, are holding back, for obvious reasons; but generally the market is merely steady. Price advances that attract attention come in those groups which are enjoying considerable recovery, or are virtually certain of having it this autumn.

Confidence in the general business situation is growing, but the time still is to come when speculators actively buy stocks to work along with the drift of the market; the money is going into stock of companies already showing improvement. The statement that the price level of stocks, as shown by compilations of "averages," the highest in a year, two years or three years, appeals to the imagination, but the actual condition is not that of a speculative boom.

Good Outlook.

Trade news at the week-end was scanty. Railroad car loadings last week were 6 per cent under a year ago and 19 per cent higher than for the previous (holiday) week. Crop moving and distribution of heavy products is getting under way, which should bring progressive improvement in railroad traffic, but the transportation index does not seem to indicate a higher level of business now compared with a year ago.

Cheap money may be counted upon to maintain bond prices in the upper grades for a long time, and as earnings improve the lower classes of fixed interest obligations will rise. On the whole the outlook for stocks and bonds is much brighter than it is for many commodities which have frozen in them a large investment that sought a hedge against inflation.

Trading volume fell in the motor stocks, but the motor accessories maintained their activity. Murray Body, Briggs and Motor Products extended their gains slightly. Briggs Stratton, Electric Auto Lite, Houdaille Hershey and Timken felt a breath of profit taking. Steels began with a bit of a rush, but caution overcame them and most of the day was spent in trying to hold on. Sloss Sheffield, Otis and Pittsburgh Steel preferred were the features of the independent steel group.

Rails Unsettled.

Rails were irregular, as was natural with the conflicting reports on earnings and advice on procedure to work back to recovery. Proposed reduction of passenger fares in the East, suggested coordination of facilities by Mr. Eastman, with Government ownership in the background, the prospect of some more reorganizations, the slowness of Congress to appreciate the need for regulatory legislation of trucks and buses, make the railroad market rather a puzzling one. Union Pacific, Central, Santa Fe, held around previous closing levels. Great Northern gave up a little. Rail equipment acted much like the rails.

Oils were the poorest as a group, a number of 1 to 2 point losses being shown in active trading. Utilities were mixed. Metals softened. Some of the food stocks found the going rather rough, in particular Corn Products. Industrial standard stocks were mostly a fraction down.

Shrinkage Report Advances Wheat

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 19.—Stimulated by reports that domestic wheat crops, winter and spring alike, have materially shrunk since the July 1 Government forecast, wheat prices averaged higher today. Black rust damage to spring wheat both in this country and Canada was tentatively estimated at about 15 per cent thus far.

Wheat closed unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅜ higher, September 84⅝@84⅞, corn ⅛ off to ¼ up, September 75⅜@75½, oats unchanged to ⅜ down, and provisions unchanged to 10 cents decline.

Structural Steel Sets June Record

New York, July 19 (AP).—Preliminary reports received by the American Institute of Steel Construction show that bookings of fabricated structural steel bulked larger during June than for any month this year and reached the high-record bookings of June, 1934. They were 40 per cent larger than the average monthly bookings last year.

Due to the slack in orders during the spring, however, the monthly average for the first half of 1935 was not quite equal to that of the year 1934.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Fresh operations on the stock exchange today were checked due to week-end settlements. Foreign bonds were steadier while transatlantic shares were uncertain, and other sections moved irregularly. There was occasional profit-taking and the close was quiet.

Paris—Rentes continued to improve in anticipation of good results regarding the deflation program. Industrial shares remained steady and banks, electrics and coal issues firmed. Chemical and international stocks declined. The closing tone was irregular.

Berlin—A heavy drop in the shares of North German Lloyd and Hapag steamship lines depressed the remainder of the list, which was weaker throughout the session. North German Lloyd declined 16 points and Hapag 15, after rumors that the capital of these companies would be cut to one-fifth of their present amount. The market closed irregular and generally weaker.

Revival Dawes Predicted Here, Says Analyst

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 19.—Industrial developments of the past ten days have vindicated Gen. Charles G. Dawes' prosperity prophecy, Franklyn Hobbs, business analyst, said today.

"The upswing Gen. Dawes predicted last winter for this month has started, an accumulation of data reveals," said Hobbs. "The gains of the past ten days are just short of sensational particularly in the steel and iron industry, the durable goods lines, which would indicate the passing of the depression."

He cited the assertions of steel-iron reviews that the current rise to 40½ per cent of capacity were among the most spectacular in the records of the industry.

"The machine tool line, certainly a durable goods, has started up with a bang. They are selling heavy tools which runs many thousand dollars per unit. It would be safe to assume that such tools were not being purchased unless the concerns had orders for many months ahead with which to keep them busy.

"Part of the heavy current automobile production can be credited to durable goods demand. The fact that motor car production is holding up so well indicates there is good commercial demand for cars. Springtime is the period for private use auto production.

"Then, again, railroad passenger traffic, where the 3.6 cents a mile rate is not retained, has made fine gains. It would appear that in the Middle West the people are going off the highways onto the rails. In the East, they continue to use the highways."

Dawes Sees Start Of Full Recovery

Salt Lake City, July 19 (AP).—The nation is "at the beginning of the first year of full business recovery from the depression," Charles G. Dawes, former Vice President, said upon his arrival here today from a fishing trip in western Wyoming.

Mr. Dawes, president of the City National Bank and Trust Company of Chicago, cited a growing demand for durable goods, larger bank clearings, an increase in electrical production and improvements in the automobile industry and other industries, as evidences of a start upon a return to normal conditions.

Oil Stocks Lower On New York Curb

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 19.—The curb market encountered further profit-taking today and losses were in the majority at the close. Oils were particularly heavy in sympathy with selling in that group on the big board. Transfers approximated 215,000 shares, compared with 237,000 yesterday.

Montgomery Ward "A," Sherwin-Williams, Sunshine Mining and Allied Mills were resistent spots, while declines of fractions to around a point appeared in Gulf Oil, Humble Oil, Creole Petroleum, Hiram Walker, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Aluminum Co. of America and Swift International.

FERA Foreman Freed In Death of Relative

Madison, Va., July 19 (AP).—Ernest Seal, FERA foreman, was free today of a charge of murder growing out of the death of John Nicholson, as a Madison County Circuit Court jury returned a "not guilty" verdict shortly after midnight. The jurors deliberated four hours.

Nicholson, the defendant's brother-in-law, died May 23 of a head injury the prosecution charged was inflicted with a rock by Seal in an argument in which Nicholson is said to have declared: "Only those that don't need jobs can get relief."

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

First under the colors of Spain, the land that is now California was destined to see the flag of that and six other nations fly over it in three centuries.

John Rodiguez Cabrillo, Portuguese navigator serving under Cortez, sailed into San Diego Bay and planted the flag of Spain, which was to remain there until 1822, when it was hauled down by Mexican authorities and replaced by their own colors.

Sir Francis Drake planted the flag of England on California soil in 1579 when, by accident, he visited the territory. He claimed it for his sovereign.

In 1812 dreams of a Russian colonization began with the establishment of a colony which maintained Fort Ross until 1841. Plans were made for a complete conquest of California, but these eventually fell through and the Russians sold their land to John Sutter, on whose land gold was discovered a few years later.

The Mexican flag replaced the Spanish flag in 1822 at Monterey, where it remained until July 7, 1846, when Commodore Sloat of the United States Navy hoisted his own country's flag at the customs house.

The abortive attempt to make a republic of California out of the State in 1846 resulted in the raising of the Bear flag for 26 days. The Bear flag is still the flag of the State.

10,000 Public Enemies

By Courtney Ryley Cooper

Chapter VI.—Chief of the Man-Hunters.

There is a general belief that the Bureau of Investigation is either an outgrowth of the Secret Service or some new Governmental arm recently built up to attack crime. It is neither. There are numerous investigative agencies of the Government, each with its defined duties. One is the Secret Service, which protects the President and runs down counterfeiters. Then there is the Intelligence Unit of the United States Treasury, devoted largely to income tax matters. Also, there is the Prohibition Unit, which, under a new set-up, is restored as the Alcohol Tax Unit to its old standing as "The Revenuers;" and so on.

The Bureau of Investigation is separate from all of these, although at times it may co-operate with any or all of them. A specific division of the Department of Justice, it was formed as a small unit in 1908. A wider growth started with the passage of the white slave law in 1912, and there was much expansion during the World War when it dealt with the activity of enemy aliens. The present growth, however, started in 1924 with a reorganization of the bureau under the administration of Supreme Court Justice Harlan F. Stone, then Attorney General.

Under the national motor vehicle theft act, commonly known as the Dyer act, the Bureau of Investigation has done some of its greatest work. John Dillinger was sought by the United States, not because he had taken part in several murders or engineered a prison escape, to say nothing of his numerous bank robberies. In escaping from the Crown Point Jail in Indiana he stole an automobile belonging to the sheriff and transported it across the State line into Illinois, thus violating the national motor vehicle theft act. The Bureau of Investigation thereupon took up the task of running him down and killing him, which it did with much celerity.

New Law Widens Scope of Activities.

Before the passage of this act, the run of bureau cases was tied tightly to the business of the Federal Government; there was little opportunity to be of assistance to State and local law-enforcement agencies. The new law widened tremendously the scope of activities. True, if a man robbed a bank, that was not the bureau's business, since the robbery of even a national bank or depository of United States funds was not a Federal crime until less then two years ago. But if that robber stole a car during that holdup and crossed a State line, he then became a fugitive from Federal justice. Many a lawbreaker, doing time in some State institution for a local crime, owes his sentence to the United States Government, although he was tried and convicted in a State court.

A Federal chase for a violator of the national vehicle theft act has often led to the solution of a local mystery. A motivating crime is found, the theft of the car being the act of the moment, impelled by something quite different—usually the desire to escape from some other law violation. The Federal agency therefore frequently becomes an assisting agency to the enforcement bodies of the Nation, later withdrawing from the case if the State charge is the more serious.

It was with this idea of co-operation between State and Federal authorities that J. Edgar Hoover began to build up the Bureau of Investigation with his installation as director in 1924. And it may be of interest to know that this man who, in 10 years, has evolved the most efficient enforcement body in the world, never had even a day of experience in a regular police department. He was never a detective; he does not read detective stories. Washington-born, with a high-school education, his first job was that of a clerk in the Library of Congress—a means unto an end. He wanted to take a law course, but he had no money to pay for it. The job in the Library of Congress paid $30 a month—plus some free advice from the older fellows:

"Don't break your neck around here. It won't get you anywhere."

But young Hoover disregarded the advice, "broke his neck," studied Library of Congress work as well as his law course, and soon got a raise. Then he got another and still another—he was making more than older employes when he graduated from law school. In 1917 he quit the Library to take a job as a clerk in the United States Department of Justice.

He broke his neck there and began to rise. In the meantime, he conjectured why certain things weren't done in investigative work. He always had wondered, ever since he could be interested in a big murder case, why the police department always seemed on the defensive. It was the crooks, it appeared, who always had the best of things—the fastest cars, the best espionage system, the best lawyers to defend them. And as the cases came into the department, he pondered upon the idea of building an investigative force that would take the offensive—that got the jump on crooks and kept it.

Studied Methods of All Agencies in World

At first it was only a dream. Then it became an obsession. Hoover studied the methods of every worthwhile law enforcement agency in the world, from the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to the Prefecture of Paris, and the Directorate of Vienna. He envisioned a group of crime chasers who would at no time overstep the proprieties which belong peculiarly to the States under our Constitution, but which, nevertheless, would act always as a tremendous assisting force, providing a central bureau for the identification of criminals, free assistance and advice whenever called upon, and a news agency of wanted men, available even to the crossroads sheriff. But beyond all this, he studied the greatest of all crime obstacles—the reason why a law-enforcement officer could get a man dead to rights and then fail to convict him in court. At last he solved it. Recently I asked him about that.

We sat in his big office on the fifth floor of the Department of Justice Building. There was nothing about the room to suggest the business of man hunting; it was sunny, comfortable, well furnished; no circulars of wanted men hung on the walls, no glass case exhibits of murderers' revolvers or hangmen's knots. There were only furled flags behind him, rows of bookshelves, a large map. Mr. Hoover looked up from his clean, business man's desk.

"Well, you see," he explained, "I naturally wondered how I would try a case, and why I would do certain things. I found that I'd gather my evidence always with an idea of presenting it in court. Then I realized that I did this because I had legal training. The answer, then, was to hire men who had been through law school and who knew what would get past a defense attorney's objections and what wouldn't—in other words, not merely to gather evidence, but admissible evidence. There's many a freed crook walking the streets, not because he's innocent, but because the evidence which would have sent him to the penitentiary couldn't get to the jury."

So, after Mr. Hoover's enthusiasm had pushed him through all the stages of promotion in the bureau, he found himself, one day in 1924, facing Attorney General Stone. He was accepting the directorship of the United States Bureau of Investigation. But on one condition—that this agency would be dedicated to absolute freedom from politics. He got what he asked for. The bureau is absolutely nonpolitical. Today the Nation eulogizes his department for its fearless, tenacious efficiency; Mr. Hoover modestly gives much of the credit to the fact that his special agents need only merit to hold their jobs. No political boss tells them to "lay off," no threats of political reprisals can halt an investigation or forestall an arrest.

There is no seniority rule in the division. A special agent starts at a salary of $2,900 a year. For that, he must show certain qualifications. He must know law. He must dress well and deport himself well, be a good talker, make friends easily, be able to glad-hand if he has to, but at the same time be sincere. He must know a certain amount of psychology—there are tests for applicants which include all these attributes. When a man becomes a special agent he also must become everything from a courageous fighting investigator to a drawing-room diplomat—and love his job more for the danger and romance than for the money. He must be sufficiently adaptable to play the part of a garage mechanic one week, a hobo the next and the playboy scion of a rich family the week after that. Not that they use false whiskers; impersonation is a matter of clothes, mannerisms and familiarity with the part one is playing.

Bureau Employs A Total of 1,500

There are 1,500 employes in the various departments. J. Edgar Hoover knows every one of them, every typist, every file clerk. Since he filled nearly every job himself, he knows exactly of what those jobs consist and the problems they present. The organization is as tightly knit as a baseball team—and Hoover is its best enthusiast, just as he is the biggest booster of the real bureau baseball team which wins local championships, a rooter for the basket ball team, which also is a championship outfit, and plays as a member of the various tennis teams which abound in the bureau—when the crooks allow him to leave his desk.

Always before every clerk and minor employe is the lure of a job on that big map which hangs on the director's wall, where pushpins, each with a name tag, denote the various special agents of the bureau, as they are moved about in accordance with their assignments. No one ever looks up a record to see where a certain special agent may be. Mr. Hoover merely glances at that big map. Some day the merest clerk in the bureau can be one of those agents if he desires. I recently watched one of them in the making.

He sat beside the director's big desk. There was no fear, no toadying. There was respect, of course, but a different type from that usually noted between employer and employed. The director was saying:

"I'm terribly glad that you've been thinking about going to law school at night. And I'm going to tell you just what I've told the other 150 fellows in the bureau who are studying law. If you make good as a clerk, remain enthusiastic, catch the spirit of this work and the determination to go through with us to the finish, the day you graduate from law school I will recommend you to the Attorney General for appointment as a special agent."

All this is vastly different from the picture with which I became so familiar in my police-reporter days.

Culbertson on Bridge

The Crystal-Gazer.

THERE is about every really exceptional bridge player something of the foresight of a crystal-gazer. He seems to sense what lies ahead and instinctively prepares for it. Perhaps this impression of omniscience is exaggerated because the average player finds the expert generally avoiding the pitfalls into which the former is constantly falling. Yet the method which the expert uses is far from black magic, nor is it a divine gift. It is the simple process of looking a step or two ahead, available to every player, but, alas, all too frequently neglected by us all.

Looking Ahead.

This matter of looking ahead requires some knowledge of the differences in meaning which are created by the order in which bids are made. Today's hand, played in a duplicate game, illustrated this point.

South, Dealer

	♠ K Q 7 5 ♡ K 10 9 7 5 ◇ 8 6 ♣ 9 2
♠ J 10 6 4 ♡ J 6 ◇ A Q 7 4 ♣ K J 8	W E S	♠ A 8 3 ♡ Q 4 3 ◇ J 10 9 5 2 ♣ 7 6
	♠ 9 2 ♡ A 8 2 ◇ K 3 ♣ A Q 10 5 4 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	1♠	Pass
2♣	Pass	2♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Now there is nothing exceptionally startling about this bidding except that it occurred at only one single table of a ten-table game, and resulted in a top for this pair. When South opened the bidding with one club, only one, North, looked far enough ahead to realize that he might wish to make two bids with his comparatively weak hand. Knowing that if he bid hearts first and then bid the spades this reversal would be an inferential force and partner would practically be compelled to rebid to the level of three, he avoided this future difficulty by a little forethought with his first bid.

At other tables the bidding proceeded:

South	North
1♣	1♡
2♣	2♠
3♡

and sometimes get as high as four.

The Play.

East opened the Jack of diamonds at every table and declarer lost two diamonds, one heart, one club and one or two spade tricks. The pair that bid only two hearts made it because the declarer played with great care.

After West had won the second diamond trick he shifted to a spade and North's King was won by East's Ace. East shifted to a club and the Queen finesse lost to the King. West returning another spade. North took with the Queen and led to the Ace of clubs and returned a small one which he trumped with the ten of hearts. East overtrumped and led a third spade, which was trumped in dummy. Declarer drew trumps, winning the second lead with dummy's Ace and when the hearts split, discarded his losing spade on dummy's established club, losing only two diamonds, one heart, one spade and one club trick.

On the Air Today

Young Mr. Lanny Ross seems to be doing quite well for himself in radio. Tomorrow night he takes over the responsibility of filling the Jack Benny spot on NBC's Blue network under the title "Lanny Ross and His State Fair Concert"—which title must please young Mr. Ross no end.

To that is added the honor of having the Show Boat titled in his honor, the change to become effective October 1. The title then will be "Lanny Ross Presents the Show Boat." Frank McIntyre will continue to play Captain Henry.

The premiere of "G-Men," a series of dramatizations of important cases from the files of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, is set for tonight at 8, WRC, under the sponsorship of Chevrolet. The first story, as you might expect, is that of the bad boy of the middle west—John Dillinger.

"G-Men," it would seem, is destined to be a natural on the air. It has all the makings of good entertainment. The portrayal of the renegade life of Dillinger will provide a corpuscle-jiggling show and the inevitable moral that crime doesn't pay provides a desirable finale.

However, the intriguing angle of "G-Men" is found in the personality of the author, the script writer who goes into the archives of the bureau and digs up the material and, in this case, who also directs the studio production.

He is, so help me, Phillips Lord. The quiet, lovable personality of Seth Parker is also the author of the "G-Men" stories. Being possessed of an imaginative turn of mind I can not help but sense the singularly humorous script that would result should Lord transpose his personalities and write "Seth Parker" for a "G-Men" show and vice versa.

From almost 100 candidates for the job as songstress on the "Pacemakers" program, radio editor judges Thursday night selected four to appear in the show Tuesday night at WRC. They are Marie Duchon and Kathleen Lawlor, who sing semi-classical things, and Marian Meitzler and Kitty Simonds, who are a bit on the hot-cha side. Its up to the radio audience to select one of the four for the permanent place.

"Dear Oddy Editor: Wow! Is this one a humdinger! Do you know that big he-man, Arch McDonald, who gives details of the ball games and the late sport news through The Washington Post and Peoples Drug Stores? Well, I caught him giving out free perfume to the ladies at a recent opening of a Peoples store in Takoma Park, Md. Think of it—perfume, and he a sports announcer. Don't tell Arthur Godfrey about this, but I guess when it appears in The Post it will be enough to make Arch stop his gallant, sweet-smelling work for the feminine non per-res. Yours till Arch catches me. Jackie Walker."

Woman Hurt in Fall Sues D. C. for $25,000

A suit for $25,000 for injuries received October 8, 1934, when she tripped and fell on the sidewalk near Eighteenth and R streets northwest, was filed yesterday against the District by Ada Tanner, a Government employe, 1610 Nineteenth street northwest.

Through her attorney, Robert E. Lynch, Miss Tanner charged the District permitted an opening to remain in the sidewalk on R street, which caused her to fall.

Miss Brico Here To Direct Concert

New York Conductor Wins Praise of Musicians.

Miss Antonia Brico, conductor of the New York Women's Symphony, who will be the first guest conductor for the National Symphony Orchestra's "Sunset Symphony," arrived yesterday to direct a rehearsal of the musicians.

Enthusiastic support of the orchestra members immediately was won by Miss Brico's dynamic leadership—a leadership which has made her America's outstanding woman conductor in the past few years.

A pioneer in finding women a place in the conductor's stand, Miss Brico has chosen for the opening concert at 8 p. m. tomorrow, Dvorak's symphony "From the New World."

Seven League Boots Weren't Fast Enough . . . . .

. . . only WIREphoto could do it!

IT WAS comparatively simple for the News Editor to present the written account of an event in Los Angeles or Miami or Minneapolis . . . but the written news wasn't enough. Pictures . . . live pictures . . . were necessary to complete the story.

But how could a picture, snapped in Los Angeles or Miami or Minneapolis, be reproduced in a newspaper half a continent away . . . while that picture was news? Airplanes couldn't do it . . . they weren't fast enough. News editors tore their hair . . . dreamed of television . . . begged scientists and engineers for help.

WIREphoto was the answer . . . transmission of pictures by telegraph . . . clear, live pictures which rode the wires with the speed of light . . . pictures which could be published with the telegraphed news story!

The Washington Post is the only morning newspaper in this territory with WIREphoto service, and during the half year WIREphoto pictures have amazed its readers with their unbelievable speed, their clearness, their right-up-to-deadline timeliness, readers have wondered: "How does WIREphoto work? How long does it take to send a picture to Denver or to San Francisco? Why aren't the pictures blurred or streaked?"

Frank Zala has answered those questions and a dozen others, in an interesting, informative article on WIREphoto. You will find that article in the Special Articles Section this Sunday in
